Welcome to the new-look What Satellite & Digital TV

We thought it was about time to redecorate, and we're hoping you like the streamlined design as much as we do. We've put our news, features, guides and reference pages in four simple sections so they're easy for you to find, and a more pleasant experience to read.

You wouldn't be reading the magazine every month if it was just about pretty pictures, so you'll notice a few new features and improvements to some of our regulars. And don't worry – none of this has happened at the expense of our regular complement of hardware tests, technical features, and digital TV highlights.

We've been looking at your e-mails, and one new feature in particular is aimed at those readers who call in asking, 'How can I get German TV channels?'. In How Can I Get...?, we'll look at a different country each month, tell you what channels are out there and what equipment you need to pick them up. Our starter for 10 points is Germany, the homeland of free TV.

We've also added an extra page of frequently asked questions, which should help new readers get a grip on the basics of receiving satellite TV.

The Channel Check and Buyers' Guide pages have also been upgraded so they're be easier to read and understand, and we've added a ratings scheme to our hardware reviews, giving you a better idea what our reviewers think of different aspects of new equipment.

There's a new look to the TV section as well. Our film and TV editor, Elise Harris, brings details of new shows before they appear in any other TV magazine, and the TV listings have received a spring clean to make them more accessible (not to mention a lot less garish!).

Over the coming months, we've lined up a host of interesting technical features for the beginner and the enthusiast, covering both satellite,. Freeview and new aspects of the digital TV experience. We'll get behind the news and introduce new ways to improve your equipment or find new content over the airwaves.

We hope you'll think the changes are for the better. If you like them, or if you want to see something else, let us know on wotsat@wvip.co.uk, or drop us a line at What Satellite & Digital TV, 53-79 Highgate Road, London NW5 1TW ■

The Freesat project

BBC AND OFCOM BACK FREEVIEW-ON-SATELLITE PLAN

Britain's big five public TV channels could be freely available on satellite in a bid to get the move to digital TV back on schedule.

The BBC has claimed there's no reason that ITV, Channel 4 and Five should be encrypted on satellite.

The corporation wants the commercial channels to join it in a free-to-air alliance similar to Freeview on digital terrestrial.

Ofcom's more realistic plan would ensure the commercial channels hand out free viewing cards like the Solus scheme operated by the BBC until it became free-to-air last year.

The arrangement would mean satellite viewers no longer need a Sky subscription to pick up the analogue terrestrial TV channels.

Ofcom believes a free-to-view satellite option is essential to meet the government's target of switching off analogue TV by 2010.

Freesat will need Digibox and dish manufacturers to come up with an easy-install package costing less than £100 if it is to be taken up widely, the BBC believes.

The government is expected to recommend a plan of action by the end of this year, based on advice from Ofcom and the TV industry.

At least 95 per cent of British homes must have converted to digital before the analogue signal can be switched off.

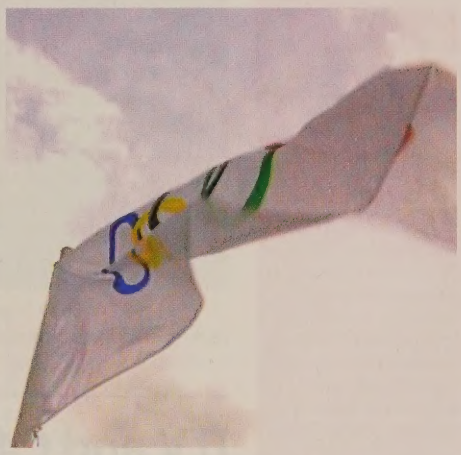
Ofcom predicts that only 78 per cent will have made the change by 2010 under current circumstances, rising to just 85 per cent with projects like Freesat.

'AT LEAST 95 PER CENT OF BRITISH HOMES MUST HAVE CONVERTED TO DIGITAL BEFORE THE ANALOGUE SIGNAL CAN BE SWITCHED OFF'

But analogue could be turned off by 2010 or earlier in urban areas, where most homes have converted to digital – with the whole country on digital TV by 2013.

Ofcom has also recommended that broadcasters are given greater incentives to go digital, such as reducing the cost of their digital TV broadcasting licences, but increasing the cost of analogue licences.

The BBC's Charter could include specific obligations to promote digital TV, and a 'Switchco' agency should be set up to co-ordinate the switch to digital.



Olympic feed frenzy

An extra four transponders of satellite capacity have been booked for pan-European satellite coverage of the Athens Olympic Games this summer.

The European Broadcasting Union has booked extra capacity on Eutelsat's Atlantic Bird 3, eBird and W3A satellites ahead of the games in August.

The extra 306MHz of Ku-band capacity will help carry the EBU's 36 non-stop programme feeds, 32 of which will be carried by Eutelsat.

Technical tests will start on August 2, followed by the pre-Olympic football tournament on August 11 and 12, and the Opening Ceremony on August 13.

The service will run until the end of the games on August 29, and will be re-activated for the Paralympic Games from September 17 to 28.

The EBU transmits in MPEG4:2:2, which can't be picked up by traditional satellite receivers, but can be watched with a specially-equipped PC.

Fusion on the move

A portable personal video recorder has been unveiled as part of Fusion Digitec's second generation of digital TV devices.

The PPVR will have a 20GB or 40GB hard drive and back-lit LCD screen, and connects to Fusion's digital video recorders via a proprietary high-speed interface.

The dual-tuner DVR range will be expanded with storage of up to 250GB – enough for up to 250 hours of programming using Fusion's SoftMPEG compression.

The PPVR interface will also be available for adding larger hard drives and DVD recorders to Fusion products.

Fusion has also demonstrated dual-decoder devices which can supply different channels to two TVs, and LCD integrated digital TVs with built-in DVD players and hard disc drives.

IN BRIEF

■ STOP PRESS: Freeview has expanded the trial of its eight-day DVB programme guide to viewers in London and the Home Counties. The service has been on trial in Wales for several months, and broadcasters want to try it with a larger audience. It will be transmitted on the BBC, Freeview, ITV and Channel 4 multiplexes, but not on the SDN multiplex used by Five and Top-Up TV. The trial will be open to any home watching on the Crystal Palace transmitter and its relays at Guildford, Hemel Hempstead and Reigate. The following receivers are currently capable of receiving the guide: Humax F2-Fox, Humax PVR8000, Pace Twin, Pace DTVA, Sony VTX-D800U, all Sony IDTVs

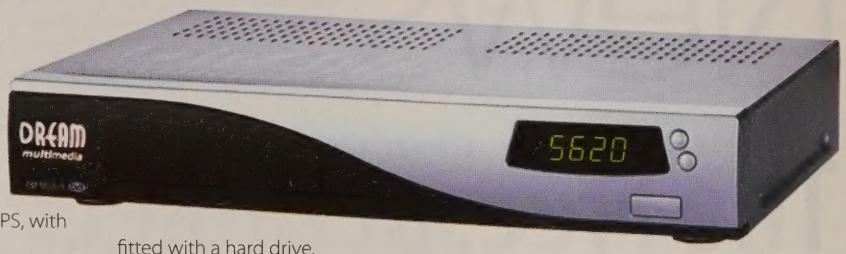
■ Al-Jazeera staff have been ordered to tone down images of excessive violence in their coverage of Iraq. Staff have complained that the station's editor-in-chief has been pressed after complaints of bias from America to the Emir of Qatar, who owns the Arabic news station

■ The TV industry meets to discuss the arrival of hi-def TV in Europe at the Defining European HDTV conference in June. Speakers from Astra, the BBC, Screen Digest magazine, America's Voom HD network and Australia's Nine Network will attend the event at the National Film Theatre on June 3. For details contact TV Conferences on 01923 690677, or see www.tvconferences.com

■ The 15th series of The Simpsons will go ahead after Fox resolved a pay dispute with the cast. Dan Castellaneta, Hank Azaria, Harry Shearer, Yeardley Smith, Julie Kavner and Nancy Cartwright will each now earn about $200,000 an episode, or $4.5million a season

Dreams come true

With a high-speed Vulcan processor and Linux operating system, the Dreambox has arrived in the UK.



The Dreambox uses a 250MHz IBM Vulcan PowerPC processor, operating at 350MIPS, with 64MB of RAM.

It has hardware MPEG2 decoding, and the Linux operating system can be used to decode MPEG4, MPEG4:2:2 or even high-definition MPEG2 broadcasts.

Top of the range is the DM 7000-S, which costs £299 hard-disc ready, or comes fitted with a disc for £90 extra.

The £199 DM 5620-S has the same specification, but can't be fitted with a hard drive.

Users can either write their own software or download modules from the worldwide Linux and Dreambox community.

Applications include web browsers, e-mail clients, and multicrypt CAMs for the built-in smart card reader.

The receivers also have a built-in Ethernet port, for network and internet connections, DiSEqC 1.2 motor control, twin common interface and Compact Flash memory slot.

Connections include a digital audio output, S-video output, two Scarts, plus USB for keyboard, mouse, cameras and storage.

ITV and C4 fight for older eyes

Older viewers will be targeted by two new free TV channels from ITV and Channel 4 in the next nine months.

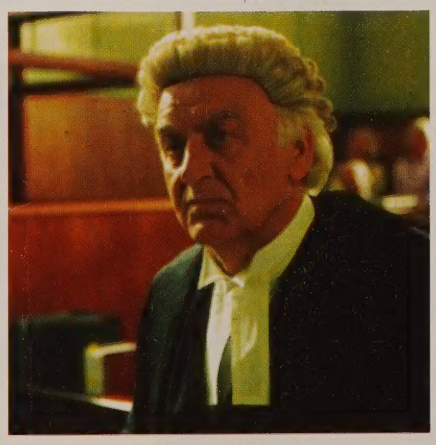
September will see the launch of ITV3, a drama and golden oldies channel with a £20million budget.

Channel 4's will follow in early 2005 with More4, which will show free-to-air on Freeview and satellite.

ITV3 will be free-to-air, and will replace the Granada Plus channel with a mixture of original daytime lifestyle shows and extended coverage of events like the Chelsea Flower Show.

For its evening schedules, the channel has drama classics like Brideshead Revisited, Cracker, Inspector Morse and Soldier, Soldier, plus 1,500 British movies like The Ipcress File.

ITV is also planning a children's channel with either Nickelodeon or Disney, while Channel 4 is expected to launch more spin-off channels.



AVC gets faster

Satellite internet provider AVC Broadband has launched high-speed 1Megabit and 2Mb packages.

The 1Mb package costs £39 a month, 2Mb costs £58 a month, and the cost of AVC's 768kb service has been reduced to £37 a month.

AVC is also offering free connection until the end of June, with installation reduced from £250 to £175.

AVC operates on Astra 2 at 28.2°E, and installation includes a new Sky dish and quad LNB, plus a Hauppauge USB satellite adapter.

Keep it together

A new all-in one integrated Freeview and DVD home cinema system from LG is designed to take the hassle out of upgrading your home entertainment setup to digital.

Priced around £299, the DAT-200 comprises a combined DVD player and Freeview adapter and a 5.1 speaker setup with five 35W satellite speakers and a 50W subwoofer.

It also has a built-in AM/FM radio tuner and can play MP3/WMA music files and display JPEG images.

Connectors on the DAT-200 include a single Scart, a composite video output and a headphone jack.

TV-by-phone: take two

Homechoice is re-launching its digital TV and internet-via-phone service with a higher speed connection and more TV choices.

The service uses ADSL phone connections to provide both TV and high-speed internet, plus movies-on-demand.

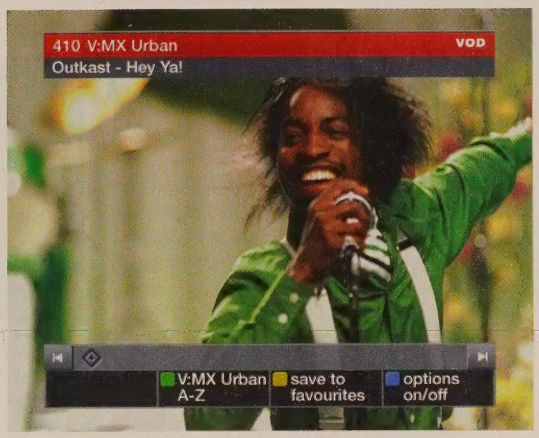
Broadcast entertainment channels include Paramount, Discovery, MTV, and E4, plus live news from BBC News 24, CNN and CNBC.

There's also on-demand TV from the latest schedules of channels including BBC Three, British Eurosport, ITV2 and Five.

More than 900 movies-on-demand are available, including Pirates Of The Caribbean and Hulk.

There's also an archive of on-demand TV shows such as Buffy, Father Ted, Boss Swap and Cutting It, and instant video jukebox channel V:MX.

The same set-top box is also used to supply Homechoice's 1Mb internet service, an always-on connection which includes 12 e-mail addresses and 100MB of web-space.



The original Homechoice service launched more than two years ago, but suffered from poor picture quality and was only available in a small part of North London.

The new service will be available through large parts of North, East, South and South-West London.

Normal installation costs £49 with a £35 monthly subscription, but Homechoice is offering an introductory rate of £1 installation and £17.50 per month subscription.

Down on the farm with TF1

Fans of celebrity TV can catch up with France's latest reality sensation through live feeds on Eutelsat W1.

La Ferme Celebrités features 15 C-list French media personalities living and working on a farm, with the usual challenges and viewer-voted evictions.

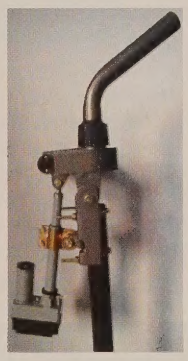
Non-names competing for more than their allotted 15 minutes of fame include Mous Douff, Maxime, Vincent Maldoom and Titia.

The show runs throughout the summer and broadcaster TF1 has chosen not to encrypt the live feeds from Eutelsat W1 at 10°E.

You can find it on 11.146GHz/H, SR 3255, FEC 3/4, with full details at http://lafermecelebrites.tf1.fr

New dual-axis tool

Technomate has unveiled the first dual-axis satellite dish mount using a combination of DiSEqC and a 36V motor.



The mount can only be used with Technomate's TM-5500DAPCI or TM-5500DPCI receivers, but what's most surprising is the £99 price.

The unit can operate dishes from 75cm to 1.1m, and uses a standard 36V polar mount to track the arc east-west, while an adapted DiSEqC mount is used to drive the vertical axis.

Like any dual-axis mount, this allows it to follow inclined-orbit satellites, and to track the far ends of the arc where polar mounts often lose accuracy.

The unit will be supplied '90 per cent ready-to-use' and Technomate says it is very quiet.

Technomate, 020 8509 2440, www.technomate.com

Thin is in

Toshiba is the latest manufacturer to dip its toe in the emerging flat screen Freeview market with the launch of its first integrated LCD TV.

The 17in 17WLT46B has a 16:9 screen, a resolution of 1280 x 768 and a contrast ratio of 400:1.

The pedestal-mounted set also features a seven-day ready EPG and has two in-built 3W speakers. Connections include two Scarts, a PC input, and stereo phonos.

The 17WLT46B is available now priced £799. An analogue-only version is also available for around £699.

■ Horse-racing fans could have a choice of two channels this summer, with the Horse Racing Channel going head-to-head with New Atheraces. HRC will be a £20/month subscription channel, with 43 per cent of the fixture list across 28 tracks. New ATR – launching free-to-air on June 21 – will have 50 per cent of the list, with 50 tracks including Ascot and Britain's three all-weather tracks

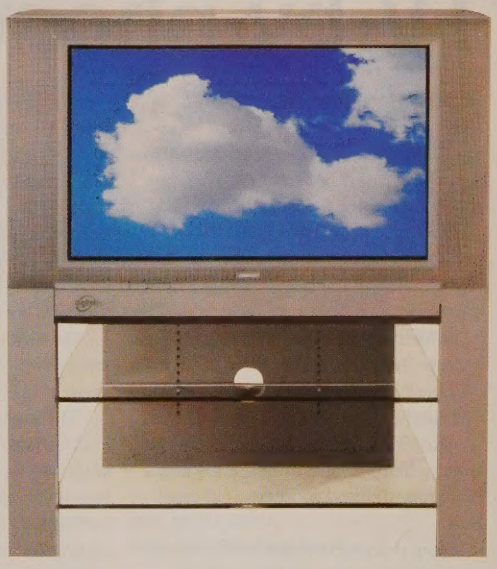
- Widespread TV-by-phone projects came closer after BT was told to cut the price of access to its high-speed DSL network for independent providers. Big players like Wanadoo said the ruling by regulator Ofcom gave a green light to TV and video-on-demand, which will be on sale next year
- One in 10 viewers don't watch BBC shows on any of its six channels in any given week, with those aged 16-34 least likely to tune in – and most likely to have Sky, cable or Freeview. Latest BARB audience research shows the BBC's 'reach' has fallen from 94.2 per cent in 1995 to 89 per cent this year
- Eurosat has been signed up as the official UK distributor for Quali-TV, which makes the only approved satellite receivers for the Euro1080 hi-def TV channel on Astra 1. The QS1080IR receiver is on sale with a viewing card for about £500. Call Eurosat on 0208 452 6699, www.eurosat.co.uk
- US cable TV outfit Comcast has dropped its £27billion hostile bid for Walt Disney. The bid failed to excite Disney shareholders and was withdrawn when Comcast posted better-than-expected annual results
- Lacuna Signal Meters has been rebranded under the Wolsey name, following an exclusive distribution deal for the UK through Triax. The SAT 2 and TERR 2 meters can be obtained from Triax UK, Abergorki Industrial Estate, Treorchy, South Wales CF42 6DL. Tel: 0845 601 0578, www.triax.co.dk
- Satellite launcher Arianespace returned to profit in 2003, making $6.2million (€9.2million). Factors in this were the return to flight of Ariane 5, and the establishment of a Launch Services Alliance with Boeing and Mitsubishi

Killer TVs from Philips



Philips has upgraded its range of integrated digital televisions with two new mid-range sets.

The 28in 28DW6558 (£500) and 32in 32DW6558 (£800) have 50Hz real flat screens and use Philips' Crystal Clear III technology to deliver 30 per cent more contrast, natural colours and high detail levels.

The onboard digital tuner also uses Philips' latest 'pulse killer' technology designed to reduce interference and impulse noise caused by domestic appliances and passing cars.

It's possible to watch an analogue programme while recording a digital one and there's MHEG-5 support for interactive services.

Both sets have a now-and-next EPG, and connections include two Scarts and a common interface slot.

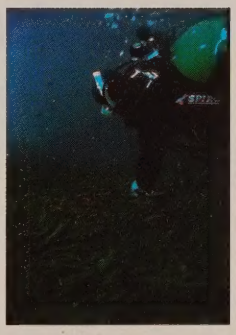
BBC mulls over hi-def timetable

The BBC is considering a satellite or cable channel for its growing library of high-definition TV.



The corporation's report on switching to digital TV says it may take a role in launching the service, which provides much greater resolution than standard digital TV.

The BBC already makes many of its natural history shows in hi-def for broadcast in America and Japan, along with some of its high-end dramas and events like The Last Night Of The Proms.

It's now investing in its own hi-def outside broadcast equipment for covering major sports events.

The report suggests that hi-def will become a popular proposition within five years, as consumers take to large-screen TV sets which show the limitations of ordinary PAL pictures.

It also warns that broadcasters could make great improvements to standard-definition TV quality by paying attention to the way services are captured and played out.

V-Stream TV to your PC

You can watch Freeview on your PC and playback from your VCR or camcorder with the Xpert DTV PCI card.

The card has a digital terrestrial tuner and remote control, with DVB EPG support and both time-shift and scheduled recording to hard disc.

It also has both composite and S-video inputs, so you can watch, capture images, or even record from external sources.

There's a picture-in-picture mode so you can watch TV while recording an external source, and the software includes an MPEG converter, editing suite, and DVD recorder.

Universal's gamble on criminal types

Crime drama series from Law & Order to Alfred Hitchcock Presents will come to Sky Digital when 13th Street launches next year.

There's just one more thing: Columbo is one of the classic crime series that 13th Street will show (image courtesy of Granada Plus)

It's already one of the top satellite and cable TV channels in both France and Spain, and parent Universal Studios Networks is hoping it will be a big success here in Britain as well.

The channel will focus on both contemporary and classic crime dramas such as Crime And Punishment and Columbo.

However, Universal's last British venture was The Studio, a movie channel which folded in 2002 after only eight months when partner NTL ran out of cash.

13th Street will be a pay-TV channel, and is likely to be available on both cable and Sky Digital.

Luxury entertainment via satellite

Luxsat is an attempt to create a satellite-powered home entertainment and gaming station.

The system stores a 150-hour video cache which is constantly updated by satellite to offer more than 200 films on demand every year.

Available initially in Luxembourg, every user will have a Luxstation that functions as a video games console, internet browser, and film and TV store.

Itv also has a DVD and CD player so it can be used as a digital photo library and personalised hard disc jukebox.

The system uses push broadcasting to fill the 160GB hard disc, and users can either pay for the Luxstation up front, then for each film or TV show individually, or take a subscription and receive the box at a lower price.

The Luxstation comes with a wireless keyboard and mouse, plus a multi-function remote control.

The Luxstation itself is based on an Intel Pentium 3 Xeon processor, with ATI Radeon 9200 graphics, and 512MB memory.

It has digital audio inputs and outputs, an Ethernet port, USB ports, plus composite and S-video video ouputs.

Eastern music television

The Middle East is set to get its own rival to MTV with the launch of the Persian Entertainment Network.

The channel can be found on both Hot Bird and Atlantic Bird 3, and features the region's biggest music and cabaret stars.

PEN is on Hot Bird, 13°E, at 11.585GHz/V, SR27500, FEC 3/4, and on Atlantic Bird 3, 5°W, at 12.669GHz/H, SR 30000, FEC 5/6.

More details of the channel can be found at www.penonline.tv

TV channels featuring fine wine, women's reality shows and Australian drama will all launch on Sky Digital this autumn.

Wine Network TV is an American-based channel, which will cover everything about wine and people who love it.

Reality Life will be aimed at women aged 18-49, as a spin-off from Reality TV with shows like Matchmaker and Taking It Off.

The Aussie Gold channel will show classic and contemporary Australian soaps, drama and films which haven't been shown in the UK. All three channels will be free-to-air and will launch either late this year or early in 2005.

The Aussie Gold Channel will feature popular soaps from Down Under (Home And Away courtesy of Five)

Ratings round-up

A complaint commonly levelled at multichannel TV is that channels rarely cater for the more serious-minded viewer.

A recent survey of public service broadcasting by Ofcom, however, seems to suggest that a significant number of multichannel viewers may not be too fussed about such matters.

The survey quizzed 6,000 households on their viewing habits and found that last year ratings for programmes such as Newsnight and Horizon fell in multichannel homes by more than a half. Hardly encouraging news for the likes of the publicly funded BBC Four, perhaps, which are looking to build up their niche audiences. On the other hand, choice is surely something to be preserved in multichannel TV (it's why most people get into reality TV in the first place) provided that choice doesn't equate to 15 different flavours of reality shows.

A predictable ratings winner was Sky One's coverage of Rebecca Loos alleged affair with Goldenballs himself, David Beckham, in April.

An interview, Rebecca Loos: My Story, conducted by Sky News's anchorwoman Kay Burley, averaged an impressive 1.6million viewers, making it the fourth highest-rating programme in the channel's history.

Sky One may be on a roll but underdog Living TV's mixture of the paranormal, the camp and American imports is also winning it some respectable viewing figures. Regularly posting ratings above the 200,000 mark, the channel is starting to give the likes of UK Gold a run for its money in the race to overtake Sky One as the so called 'sixth' channel; it peaked recently with more than half a million viewers for its Easter Most Haunted Live show.

Do not adjust your set. Troubleshooter is bracing itself for a potential deluge of technical queries regarding the temporary loss of picture on ITV1 on Friday and Saturday evenings, following the arrival of Blank Screen. This 'innovative' new quiz show features – you guessed it – a blank screen for 60 minutes and a voiceover encouraging people to text in the answers to questions for a chance to win some cash. As well as being dirt-cheap to produce, the idea was apparently inspired by a technical fault at the BBC which led to a blank screen drawing a surprisingly high number of viewers. At least it's less painful to watch than the 24 Hour Quiz.

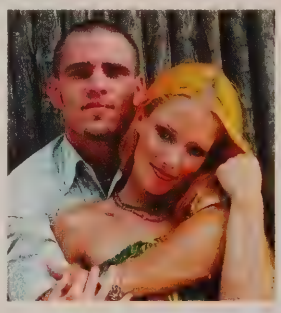
■ Carrying on in the fine tradition of Nation 217's Flipside TV, where guests pass amusing comment on what's currently showing on other satellite channels, an American cable channel came up with a novel way to commemorate the showing of the last episode of Friends on America's NBC network. Viewers of TV Land (a sort of US version of UK Gold) were greeted with the sight of TV Land staff watching the episode, recommending to viewers that they turn over to rival broadcaster NBC to watch it. Rumours that the ratings-starved ITV1 plans do the same with BBC1 on a Saturday night are entirely fictional.

■ One show that's highly unlikely to inspire fond memories is reality series Forever Eden. Showing on Fox TV in the States, this ambitious marriage of Temptation Island with elements of The Truman Show sent a group of singletons to a paradise island for an indefinite period in an attempt to create a real-life soap opera. Unfortunately, the ambitious $20million series was cancelled after just one month owing to a poor response from possibly envious viewers.



■ Strapped for cash? Investment advice firm The Motley Fool has come up with 25 tips for saving money which include sage fiscal advice relevant to Wotsat readers. Aside from the obvious ones (cutting back on alcohol and takeaways) readers are encouraged to cut back on their satellite TV package and asked, 'do you really need those extra films and sports channels?'.

Subscribing to your favourite magazine is another excellent piece of money-saving advice to which Footprint can only add, see page 23! ■

Competitions

Season 9 of The X Files marked the end of the long-running, successful sci-fi series. If you want to find out if the truth really was out there, Twentieth Century Fox Home Entertainment is releasing the entire series as a DVD boxset on June 7. What Satellite & Digital TV has five boxsets of The X Files: Season 9 to give away to readers who can answer the following question. What was the nickname given to Mulder's shady and rather unhealthy government nemesis? Was it: a) The Cigarette Smoking Man, b) Deep Throat, or c) Pete 'Pies' Petersen? Send your answer, marked The X Files Season 9 competition' to the usual address below.

Directed by and starring Kevin Costner, the acclaimed Western Open Range is out to buy and rent on DVD and video from Universal Pictures Video from May 31. What Satellite & Digital TV has five copies of the DVD to give away to readers. For a chance of winning one, just answer the following question. Which famous historical character did Kevin Costner play in a previous Wild West epic? Was it: a) Wyatt Earp, b) Billy the Kid, or c) Yosemite Sam?

Post your answer, marked 'Open Range competition' to the address below. Closing date for competitions is June 22, 2004.

Competitions address: Send your answers marked with the competition which you are entering, along with your name and address, to: What Satellite & Digital TV, Highbury Entertainment London, 53-79 Highgate Road, London NW5 1TW. All competition entries for June's issue must reach us by June 22, 2004

RICHARD ALLEN

If I sat down and thought for a year, I doubt I could come up with a dafter idea than starting a new business that relies on customers having old and obsolete equipment – and not replacing it for something newer and better.

On the face of things that's Top-Up TV, the new digital terrestrial pay-TV service.

But Top-Up was cooked up by David Chance and Ian West, both ex-Sky and smart cookies. So there had to be method in the apparent madness.

Top-Up is aimed at TV viewers who want more programmes than Freeview can offer, but don't want to sign up for the full Sky monty, and don't want to be tied by long contracts. One of the most infuriating things about Sky (like Freeserve e-mail) is the hassle of cancelling a contract.

For £2 a week Top-Up serves up some Kids channels, Gold, Discovery and Turner movies. The sign up fee is £20, initially cut to £10 for people who signed up online. In theory, you can cancel each month, so the maximum commitment is £8. I bought myself a viewing card to try out the service and the cancellation.

Top-Up is – to quote David Chance – a 'lean, mean operation', with just three people on the payroll – rising later to six or seven – and all the work being outsourced to consultants and subcontractors. The company needs to stay small and offer only a limited programme service so that it avoids the kind of competition with Sky that squashed ON/ITV Digital.

'THE REALITY IS THAT NO FREEVIEW BOXES OR IDTVs CAN YET BE USED; MANY MAY NEVER BE USABLE'

The service launched on March 31 – on schedule – without any press launch event and with the admission that only old ONdigital and ITV Digital boxes could receive the service.

Top-Up's original announcement of February 2 had assured that 'all Freeview customers need to do to receive Top-Up TV is check that their set-top box has a slot for a viewing card and then call the subscription hotline on 08700 543 210 or register online at www.topuptv.com. They will then be sent a viewing card to receive the encrypted channels.'

The trade press reported this in good faith. The reality is that no Freeview boxes or IDTVs can yet be used; many may never be usable.

Two existing Freeview receivers – from Nokia and Netgem – should have been upgradeable for pay viewing at the end of April, when plug-in CAM (Conditional Access Modules) costing £40 from French company SCM were due to go on sale.

Top-Up expects new boxes from Thomson to go on sale with embedded software for pay reception in June.

Top Up is 'in discussion' with Pace about a software upgrade that will pay-enable around 250,000 Digital TV Adapters already sold. A question mark hangs over all other existing Freeview boxes and IDTVs because they will all need hardware and/or software upgrades even if they already have a card slot.

By launch day Top-Up's website and phone line were asking would-be subscribers a string of questions and accepting card orders only from viewers who confirmed that they owned an old ON/ITV Digital box.

The company's launch day press release also made the situation much clearer:

'All Freeview customers need to do to receive Top-Up TV is check their set-top box is compatible: Initially, only ex-ITV Digital boxes will be able to receive Top-Up TV; however, there are some other boxes and Integrated Digital TVs that may be compatible in the future (eg Pace model DTVA and Nokia 221) and, from June 2004 we expect retailers will offer a number of new boxes that are compatible with Top-Up TV and these will be available from a range of manufacturers.'

I tried my card with three old ON/ITV Digital boxes, from Philips, Nokia and Pace. I suspect I am unusual in still having the original remote controls, still working.

Setup for all three boxes was successful. But the user must read and carefully follow a 12-step instruction leaflet, along with the 'Urgent – Please Note' correction note for Step 6. The correction warns that the box must be left on and tuned to specified channels overnight to receive an automatic software download – not switched to standby mode as originally instructed.

Top-Up transmits info pages clear and unencrypted when there are no programmes, so most receivers should find the pay channels and tell viewers how to subscribe. But some receivers, such as recent Pace boxes, simply ignore any channels with conditional access flags, and fail to find the Top-Up channels.

The Top-Up transmissions are spread between the SDN multiplex A, which also carries Freeview Five, and multiplex 2, which carries Freeview Channel 4. So viewers unable to receive Freeview Five and Channel 4 will be unable to receive all the pay programmes – even if they have a compatible receiver.

The encryption system used is based on the Canal Plus system employed by ON/ITV Digital and heavily hacked. But the Top-Up cards use Version 1+, as introduced just as ON/ITV Digital went out of business. The same new system is used in France and Spain, after all V1 cards were swapped for V1+.

David Chance believes there is less incentive to hack an £8-a-month system than a high-value subscription service; he also believes that if the continental cards are hacked it should not affect Top-Up in the UK. Time will tell.

Much more important, I'd say, is the way the old boxes performed. By today's standards they are painfully slow to respond, awkward to use and prone to picture break-up, just like the old ONdigital and ITV Digital services. This may well be due to the receiver's age rather than 64QAM transmission. But it surely makes Top-Up's future hang on how many manufacturers now come up with updates for modern boxes or new boxes that are already Top-Up-ready ■

Will US screens go dark?

ALL THAT'S NEW IN THE SKIES ABOVE THE US AND FROM THE NETWORKS ON THE GROUND IS REPORTED EVERY MONTH BY CHRIS FORRESTER

Michael Powell is (US Secretary of State) Colin Powell's son. Michael Powell is also head of the Federal Communications Commission, the all-powerful controller of America's airwaves. And he is making broadcasters nervous.

The FCC has already ruled that America must switch off its analogue transmissions once 85 per cent of homes in a neighbourhood can receive digital signals. But most Americans get their primary signals either from the local cable operator or via a satellite dish from either DirecTV or Echostar. And Mr Powell says this means that these cable and satellite viewers count towards the 85 per cent rule, and consequently local stations should switch their analogue signals off – now.

'Not so fast', shouted most broadcasters. Just because the main networks transmit their signals via cable and satellite this still leaves millions and millions of home-owners who are content with a 'rabbit ears' set-top antenna, or sets in bedrooms or kitchens, picking up over-the-air signals. And switching off analogue broadcasts will instantly render these sets obsolete – and risk losing those all-so-valuable eyeballs.

There are about 110million US homes, of which some 94million pay for their signal feeds, either to cable or satellite companies. There are also nine million homes with full HDTV sets installed. If you do the mathematics you'll see that means the 85 per cent has already been achieved. The US government has ruled that on December 31, 2006, all analogue broadcasting must cease, and it will 'reclaim' the bandwidth provided its 85 per cent target has been met. But there's also been a loose understanding that because so many stations have yet to convert to digital – and almost all cable systems are also still sending out analogue signals – that this date was going to be allowed to slip, until the 85 per cent figure was reached conventionally.

> 'NO CONGRESSMAN WANTS TO UPSET HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF REGISTERED VOTERS BY SWITCHING OFF TV SIGNALS WITHOUT SOME SORT OF COMPENSATION'

Currently, only those viewers who have bought digital TV sets (including HD sets) capable of picking up digital signals over-the-air count towards the 85 per cent statistic. But now Powell says the 94million homes which pay for signals should count towards the target. If Powell gets his way around 30million or so citizens – either rural residents who live well away from cities or towns, or simply people who do not want to pay for TV signals – would be instantly disadvantaged.

One branch of the FCC tends to agree. As at the end of March, an impressive 1,175 television stations scattered all over the US had started transmitting in digital. In fact, 84.69 per cent of the population (note how very close that is to 85 per cent) had at least five digital stations they could tune to if they had TV sets fitted with digital tuners, of course. But, when you convert the millions and place them into actual towns and cities, the numbers of disenfranchised viewers is a worry, say broadcasters. Like New York, which has 663,000 homes which do not subscribe to any sort of pay-TV. Or San Francisco, where it is 299,000. These people, for whatever reason, are happy with over-the-air signals. Then there are cities like Los Angeles and Dallas, with very high numbers of Hispanic residents (the actual numbers are hard to pin down) that are also seemingly happy with ordinary signals mainly of the local Spanish-language stations. They don't want 'network' TV.

Powell has already demonstrated that switching off analogue would save broadcasters millions of dollars in huge energy bills for their massively inefficient towers and masts. Digital transmission works at power levels of around one hundredth of analogue. One station boss says he could immediately save $72,000 a year on each of his eight giant masts by switching off analogue. But Powell is saving his trump card till last.

He is using the September 11 argument to suggest that it is patriotic to switch off. He says that in the wake of 9/11 the nation's police, fire and rescue and other law enforcement agencies need the old frequencies to boost their admittedly antiquated radio systems.

But most critics of Mr Powell's early switch-off plan say his intentions are not quite so honourable. They see the spectrum freed up as being immensely valuable. The UK, for example, gained some $45billion from selling some 3G spectrum to mobile phone operators a few years ago. The value for this 'new' spectrum in the US could be worth much more.

Powell's enthusiasm is such that he is even suggesting to some complainants that Congress might be prepared to give a subsidy – similar to the one taking place currently in Italy – where every home is given a cash incentive to buy a new set-top decoder box for digital TV. Of course, no Congressman wants to upset hundreds of thousands of registered voters by switching off TV signals without some sort of compensation. And the promise of a new, clearer picture, plus perhaps a few extra channels helped by a handout from the government will go down a treat with those same voters ■

GIVE US YOUR VIEWS ON DIGITAL TV – THE PROGRAMMES, THE EQUIPMENT, THE DEALERS AND THE PRICES

LONG LIVE FREEVIEW

I'm writing in response to Ian West of Top-Up TV. I totally disagree with: 'I can see the day when channels like Ftn will need the revenue from subscribers.'

The reason why two million Freeview viewers chose Freeview was because they did not want to pay a subscription to the likes of Sky, but if Ftn and other channels did join Top-Up TV, there would be a chance of Top-Up's fee of £7.99 going up, the two million would gradually drop and thus the slow death of Freeview would start.

– RICHARD DAVIES, WREXHAM

■ The loss of any entertainment channels could be bad for Freeview, but Ian's point was that there's only a limited amount of advertising to support these channels; their licences are expensive and they might have no choice but to join a subscription package. But if Freeview continues to grow as it has so far the prospects could be a lot better for channels like Ftn, so don't panic just yet!

DON'T POP MY PORN

I wonder what jurisdiction the UK lot think they have over the content of a porn station transmitting from say Italy, Scandinavia, or an uplink bounced halfway around the world?

Furthermore, from the stories you have published it would seem that UK hardcore porn actually fails the Trades Descriptions Act, as it's anything but hardcore. Usually, the whole trade falls more into the category of comedy farce – i.e. good for a giggle, but usually anatomically impossible!

– G S CHATLEY, BY E-MAIL

■ They don't have a lot of power, but they can stop British retailers selling or advertising a foreign channel – although it is years since that's happened. Still, adult channels on Sky seem to prosper because they're easy to access, and the regulators seem to be gradually relaxing their censorship over here as well.

IN THE BALANCE

May I suggest that the contents of What Satellite & Digital TV are becoming somewhat unbalanced?

Many, many TV periodicals are published with full Sky listings, including Sky's own programme guide, so there seems little point in duplicating this information. By all means draw attention to Sky programmes of exceptional interest or to new channels and changes, but don't waste page after page on the full listings.

I am sure that a good number of your readers are satellite enthusiasts, for whom What Satellite is primarily intended and who, like myself, have little, if any, affection for Sky and the majority of its programming.

Why not draw attention to the interesting content of some of the many free-to-air channels – choosing, say, a different satellite each month?

– J B STAYNES, BY E-MAIL

■ We hope you're pleased with our regular new 'How Can I Get...?' column, and our unique Euro 2004 coverage. Our new look isn't just cosmetic, and we're planning more Euro TV coverage in the coming months.

We believe there's still a demand for monthly listings, but tell us what you think. Do we need more listings, more reviews, more practical features, or more on foreign channels?

As Frasier Crane might say: 'We're listening!' ■

REBOOTED OUT OF TIME

Beware of Sky's customer service when having Sky Plus problems and never follow any instructions unless you have first offloaded any recorded programmes. My experience shows it is better to be safe than sorry.

In early April my Sky Plus box began acting strangely – not recording programmes or only recording them partially. I had one of the earliest Sky Plus boxes, but had taken out an extended warranty. Sky quickly had the box replaced, just in time for our two-week holiday.

When we returned from holiday the box had only 3 per cent free space remaining. I was surprised so little space was left, as I'd carefully planned what would be recorded while we were away and left more margin than that. Nevertheless, we watched two programmes and I downloaded two others to our DVD recorder for later viewing.

I was surprised that, after the deletions, only 12 per cent free space was reported. Counting up space used by the remaining recordings, I discovered that they took up only 49 per cent of the hard drive space.

Sky asked me to switch off the box, disconnect at the mains, remove the viewing card, then switch back on. I did this. I was then told to check my Personal Planner. I discovered to my horror that all recorded programmes had been lost.

The technical person said it was something that didn't normally happen, but then admitted that it does occasionally occur.

Aside from being upset at losing programmes, I was shocked at Sky's lack of customer service in being doubly at fault. First, it shipped me a box which hadn't been refurbished properly. Second, it had me perform a procedure that caused programmes to be lost.

– DANNY SULLIVAN, SALISBURY

■ It's the first time we've heard of this particular problem, but we are aware that removing the viewing card can be used to reset other features like the Favourites list and to remove Personal Planner items that won't delete.

But the advice is clear – don't remove your Sky Plus viewing card to do a reboot unless you've got everything backed up. Thankfully, DVD recorders are becoming quite affordable these days ■

What's on this month

TV highlights and gossip, with Elise Harris, film and TV editor

Not so wonderful

Quirky comedy drama Wonderfalls looked promisingly different, and an ideal replacement for anyone missing Buffy – but Fox executives in the US cancelled the show after only four episodes. It was all about a young woman who works in a gift shop near Niagara Falls – the gifts and toys come alive and talk to her. The show was due to come to Sky One this summer.

In the US it was replaced by The Swan – a gruesome reality TV show that takes average-looking women and submits them to plastic surgery and other 'life-altering' treatments before picking the 'prettiest' for a beauty pageant.

The Swan is hosted by Amanda Byram, familiar to viewers of BBC Three's sadly axed Liquid News.

Angel delight?

Angel is over – but there are strong rumours it will return in the form of several TV-movies. Joss Whedon's denouement has left many loose ends and a lot of characters for dead, and many fans are demanding a proper conclusion.

A campaign to save the show helped raise its profile – but had little effect on the network's decision to cancel the show. However, a TV movie is set to air in September in the States. Eliza Dushku may well feature – her series Tru Calling has also been cancelled.

There is talk over a further five Angel romps – to be shown every two months over a year.

Whedon's other prematurely cancelled series, Firefly, is set to end up on the big screen in 2005.

film round-up

Some of the month's film highlights and lowlights.

LOVE ACTUALLY

Portmanteau film, directed and written by Richard Curtis. Some sections are good – Bill Nighy as a washed-up rock star is particularly entertaining and Emma Thompson puts in a touching performance as Alan Rickman's wronged wife. Most are middling – Hugh Grant and Martine McCutcheon make an unlikely screen couple and the section featuring Keira Knightley is bland.

The film claims to explore many aspects of love, but it's mostly very middle-class and repressed.

Simply Super

Smallville is one of the few shows that will definitely be returning next year – and it's likely to feature appearances from Supergirl.

Other likely scenarios include Lana discovering Clark's secret and Lex and Clark's relationship taking an unexpected turn (well, unexpected to anyone who has no knowledge of the Superman story pre-Smallville).

Enterprise movie on the horizon

The future of Star Trek: Enterprise is also uncertain – another installment in the movie franchise seems inevitable now that a new 'prequel' movie has been announced., but it would mean an end to the series.

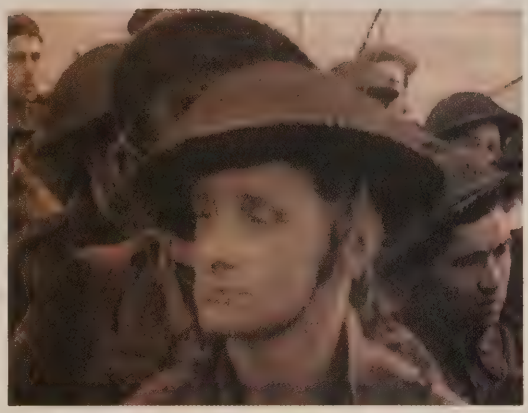
If it happens, storylines ought to include Captain Archer meeting a time-travelling Picard, Hoshi and Mayweather actually getting something to do, T'Pol wearing an outfit that doesn't emphasise her bosom, Porthos getting rabies, and Tucker and Reed declaring undying love for each other. None of these is likely.

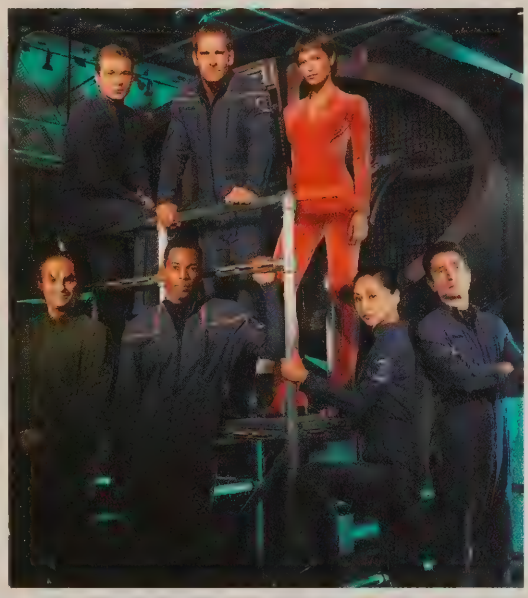
D-Day programmes

June 6 marks the 60th anniversary of the D-Day landings. The war had been raging for six years when, in June 1944, the Allied Forces launched a massive attack by sea, land and air. During Operation Overlord more than 150, 000 soldiers landed on the beaches of Normandy, leading to the defeat of the Nazis.

The anniversary is being marked across the channels. TCM is showing war-themed double-bills throughout June – including Where Eagles Dare and Kelly's Heroes. UKTV History commemorates the anniversary between May 31 and June 5.

Across the other channels, National Geographic is showing D-Day: Men And Machines, The History Channel has a 'D-Day 60' week.





Colin Firth, Liam Neeson, Laura Linney, Billy Bob Thornton, Martin Freeman (The Office), Gregor Fisher (Rab C Nesbitt) and Kris Marshall (My Family) also star – and almost everyone who has ever appeared in British comedy pops up in the background. And there's blink-and-you'll-miss-it cameo from Elisha Cuthbert (Kim from 24).

It's overly long, but you can always make tea during the dull bits. Don't worry – you probably won't miss anything very exciting.
Sky Box Office/Front Row

Another film that has very little to recommend it apart from an appearance by Bill Nighy. Someone should knight the man – he seems to be the saviour of British entertainment. Kate Beckinsale stars, tightly packed into PVC – which will tempt anyone who likes that sort of thing to watch.

(2003, 18)

Unfortunately this is Bill Nighy-free. Although even he would have found it hard to save this one. Paul Kaye (Dennis Pennis) and Johnny Vegas star in this lacklustre film about crown green bowls. Vince Vaughn and James Cromwell are wasted.
Sky Box Office/Front Row

(2001, 15)

Joaquin Phoenix and Anna Paquin star in this dark comedy set in a US army base in Berlin before the fall of the Wall. Scott Glenn plays a sociopathic sergeant with a grudge against wheeler-dealer soldier Ray Elwood (Phoenix).
Sky Box Office/Front Row

SPIRITED AWAY

(2002, PG)

Sky Box Office/Front Row

(2003, 18)

Ewan McGregor whips his bits out again – this time for the benefit of Tilda Swinton. Drama set in 1950s Scotland.
Sky Box Office/Front Row

CATCH ME IF YOU CAN

(2002, 12)

After a number of less-than thrilling movies, Leonardo DiCaprio and Tom Hanks both redeem themselves in a fascinating film based on the semi-true story of teenage conman Frank Abagnale Jr.
Sky Movies 1

(2003, 15)

Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner put on skintight suits and play at being superheroes. Colin Farrell has a big target on his head. Watch it if you must.
Sky Movies 1

2. BBC Radio 7
3. BBC 5 Live

It was a no-show from previous winners BBC Radio One and Virgin. BBC Radio Seven – available to satellite and DAB listeners and on the internet – scored very well, thanks to its mix of comedy and drama classics and contemporary favourites.

Lesley Douglas, the Controller of BBC Radio 2, said: 'How wonderful! I would like to thank all your readers for voting for us and look forward to sharing the news with our presenters and production teams. I hope we can continue to entertain you with great music and programmes and appreciate your support.'

FAVOURITE ENTERTAINMENT CHANNEL

1. BBC Three
2. E4
3. Hallmark

Surprisingly, Sky One didn't even get a look-in in this category – but the less mainstream BBC Three triumphed. Perhaps it's the fact that BBC Three is available on all digital platforms, for free.

Stuart Murphy, Controller of BBC Three, said: 'A big "thank you" to the readers of the magazine for voting BBC Three as Best Entertainment Channel – it's a real compliment to get chosen by the viewers.'

BEST SCI-FI

1. Stargate SG-1
2. Smallville
3. Angel/Dead Like Me

This was a close-run race, with Angel and Smallville almost ruining Stargate's victory. Enterprise, last year's winner, was nowhere to be seen in the votes.

BEST PROGRAMME

1. Little Britain
2. Most Haunted
3. Alias

A different make-up to this year's votes. Last year The Simpsons, Buffy and The Sopranos reigned supreme. The emphasis was more comedic this year, with Most Haunted garnering quite a few votes. Classic shows did very well, with Columbo and Only Fools And Horses almost making it to the top three spots.

BEST NEW SHOW

1. Little Britain (BBC Three)
2. John Doe (Sci-Fi)
3. The Dead Zone

If we had asked for your opinion a little later, there is no doubt Nighty Night and Catterick would have featured in this category, and in Best Comedy. As it was, Little Britain managed to dominate the competition – here at least. Battlestar Galactica – although only the pilot has aired so far – also did quite well.

BEST COMEDY

1. Monkey Dust (BBC Three)
2. Little Britain (BBC Three)
3. Scrubs (Sky One)

A surprising result – especially considering Little Britain's triumph in the Best Programme and Best New Programme categories. We sense tactical voting was talking place. We did not have an animated programme category this year, but if we had there is no doubt Monkey Dust would have challenged The Simpsons previously unassailable position as number one. Former Fast Show star Simon Day's Grass was also popular.

Stuart Murphy, Controller of BBC Three, was also a little bewildered. 'It's brilliant that everyone is as into the comedy talent of David Walliams and Little Britain as much as we are, but it is disconcerting that there are so many sick and twisted comedy addicts who love the dark world of Monkey Dust. Keep tuning into BBC Three – over the next year our plan is to be as well known for great drama and documentaries as we are for comedy.'

WHAT satellite AND DIGITAL TV AWARDS 2004

BEST DRAMA SERIES OR SERIAL

1. Six Feet Under (E4)
2. 24 (BBC Three and Sky One)
3. The Sopranos (E4)

The Sopranos and 24 dipped in popularity this year – but Six Feet Under did remarkably well.

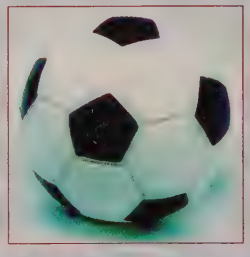
BEST FACTUAL PROGRAMME

1. Days That Shook The World (pictured right)
2. FBI Files
3. Location Location Location

BEST SPORTS SHOW/EVENT

1. Gillette Soccer Saturday (Sky Sports 1)
2. Revista De La Liga (Sky)
3. Wimbledon (BBC)



BEST SOAP

1. Coronation Street
2. Eastenders
3. Hollyoaks

Coronation Street won by a landslide – but second placed Eastenders did almost three times as well as its nearest rival. Hollyoaks only just beat Emmerdale and Neighbours.

BEST CLASSIC SHOW

1. Open All Hours
2. Only Fools And Horses
3. Babylon 5

Also featured in the voting were Monty Python's Flying Circus, Dad's Army and Xena: Warrior Princess.

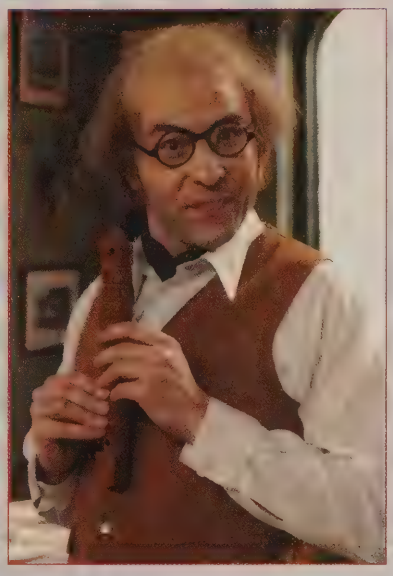
Only Fools And Horses was just pipped to the top spot – despite winning the BBC's search for the Nation's Favourite Comedy a few months ago



BEST NEWCOMER

1. David Walliams (Little Britain)
2. Ellen Muth (Dead Like Me)
3. Tricia Helfer (Battlestar Galactica)

David Walliams' victory gives Little Britain three wins this year, and gives BBC Three its fourth prize. Ricky Gervais did well – but he's more mainstream than newcomer this year.

SEXIEST FEMALE

1. Tricia Helfer
2. Sarah Michelle Gellar
3. Kirsty Gallacher/Kay Burley

Tricia Helfer from Battlestar Galactica graced our cover back in February – and she obviously struck a chord in our readers. She was your favourite for sexiest female, beating previous winners Sarah Michelle Gellar, Kirsty Gallacher and even the three-time winner Kay Burley – although all of these did well in the poll.

SEXIEST MALE

1. Tom Welling
2. Michael Rosenbaum/David Boreanaz
3. Sean Bean

Peter Andre, 'Alfie from Eastenders', Jeremy Paxman and David Walliams all got votes, as did the more predictable Brad Pitt and Colin Farrell aficionados. In the end the competition was hot – but Tom Welling ended up on top. Michael Rosenbaum and David Boreanaz were close rivals.

READERS' COMPETITION WINNER

We enjoyed all your entries for ideas for 'a rip-roaring historical series', but the overall winner is Paul Bowman, of Dumfries & Galloway, who would like to see a show focusing on 'Life along Hadrian's Wall – a mixture of What The Romans Did For Us and a prequel to Blackadder'. He wins a Sony IDTV

Mighty fine

Elise Harris joins Noel Fielding, star of BBC Three's The Mighty Boosh, on a journey through time and space

If you're a little bored of all those sitcoms set in a pub in which people sit around and whine about relationships – or sit on a sofa and have wacky family hijinks, then BBC Three may have something that will appeal to you.

Fans of the ridiculous will cheer, and anyone craving something a little bit out-of the ordinary will rejoice.

In The Mighty Boosh Noel Fielding and Julian Barratt play Vince Noir and Howard Moon – zoo-keepers at Bob Fossil's Zooniverse – but they tend not to stay there.

Noel Fielding says:' The zoo's quite irrelevant in a way, but it gives us somewhere to be. Usually what happens is that we find like a magic box and get sucked into another world, or go to the Arctic – we never really stay there because we always get bored. But even if we set it in a flat – or even if we set it in the Arctic – we'd probably end up somewhere else – in a library or something. We never keep still.'

There are sitcom elements, but not all that many; the interaction between the characters keeps it grounded in something approaching reality. Julian and Noel's relationship is a bit like Laurel and Hardy in a way.

'He's a bit of a dreamer who tries to better himself and I tag along for the ride and usually end up saving us if we're in trouble – or I always end up on top. That bit's quite understandable, really. But we meet characters made of cheese and stuff like that and that freaks people out because they go, "what's happening?"'

The pilot was in front of an audience, but the full-length series is not.

'You know when you're watching TFI Friday or something – people are having fun and you're not part of it. We decided that wasn't really the way. We also didn't play any other characters other than the main two in the pilot and in the series we play a lot more.'

Julian and Noel play all the monsters and all the weird creatures. Noel is the Spirit of Jazz at one point and Julian plays a fusion guitarist with a huge Afro with a door to another dimension.

Julian also plays 'a man made out of cloth, called Mr Foo' who lives in a mirror world, while Noel is an evil octogenarian hitch-hiker 'with a polo over his eye'.

Other characters include their boss, played by American comedian Rich Fulcher, and the kiosk owner – played by Julian's brother. 'He's the sort of magic man and whenever we're in trouble we go to him to sort it out. We've tried to ground the magic a little bit and the fact we always have to get back to the zoo and usually our boss sets the plot in motion.'

The show also features Matt Berry, who was in Garth Merenghi's Darkplace on Channel 4. 'He's got an amazing voice – he's only young but he sounds like a Radio 4 announcer.'

It's all studio-based, adding to the eerie, unreal feeling.

'We wanted to make it like a Cocteau film or something – make it slightly stylised. We don't really like location – especially not in England – it's just really grey and muggy. '

The comedy, odd as it is, is not nasty or cruel. 'It's quite happy; it's quite uplifting and joyful and colourful – it's a bit like The Wizard Of Oz or something.'

Noel says he likes shows like The Office, but The Mighty Boosh is a step away from that kind of realism.

'It's not real in any way. It's not played real, it's hyper-real and quite silly and fun. It's not dark, though there are bits in it that are quite weird and freaky, but on the whole it's a bit more like The Monkees or The Goodies.'

He is not offended by comparisons to seminal 1970-1980s children's show Rentaghost, a programme that had deep layers of meaning and subtexts generally not immediately apparent to grown-ups.

'I quite like Rentaghost. There is an episode where a grim reaper comes to take Julian to Monkey Hell – but they transport him back so he can perform a haunting. We sort of thought of Rentaghost because the way we transport him back we were saying, "maybe you should just click your fingers and you'll disappear."'

There are women in several episodes, but no female characters who appear every week.

'The reason we don't have a regular woman in it is it's about me and Julian, and I'm kind of the woman. He's quite big and manly and I suppose I'm a bit effeminate so like whenever we go anywhere the baddies always mistake me for a woman.'

He thinks the show, with its musical numbers and flights of fancy, might throw people.

'It might take them a couple of watches. It's not really based on anything – it's not a satire or a pastiche. We're not satirising the media or types of people, it's just its own thing.'

The Mighty Boosh has been around for a while, and has developed a following already. They had a successful show at the Hen and Chickens in Highbury for many years, several at Edinburgh, and on the radio

He says it was frustrating for him working on the radio, but the opportunity to do a TV series was exciting.

'You realise how visual your ideas are when you have to do radio. Julian really loves it, because he plays in a band, it gave him a chance to create audio landscapes.

'I really get into costumes and drawing the characters and creatures, so for me radio wasn't as interesting. It was more interpreted just through voice, which is not as good for me because I can't have fun drawing all the pictures and stuff like that.'

Noel has appeared in several series, but this is the first time he's been involved in writing a full-length series. He is excited it has finally come to fruition, but is trying to temper his enthusiasm.

'We were as ready as we could be. We were raring to go. We nearly did a show with Channel 4 a few years ago; it all fell through and went wrong so we were a bit more cynical this time, thinking, let's not get too excited.'

Now it's made and all ready to be shown, he is happy they had time to develop the ideas.

'We're quite pleased. It's what we wanted to do. We're not panicking or anything because we made what we wanted to make, so it doesn't matter what happens now. If people don't like it at least we did what we wanted to do.

The Mighty Boosh is on BBC Three on Tuesdays at 10.30pm

PLAY AWAY

Playmakers on FX dishes the dirt on professional sportsmen. Elise Harris talked to star player Omar Gooding American football may not be big news over here – but in the US it's a national obsession.

So when sports channel ESPN decided to screen a controversial drama show about what goes on behind the scenes the public was fascinated – but football's governing body, the National Football League, was horrified.

Playmakers focuses on the fictional Cougars football team. After a short run, and complaints from football players and the league itself, the show was cancelled.

Omar Gooding, star player Demetrius Harris (aka DH), admits he was disappointed, but says all involved could see it coming.

'We saw the heat that we got from the league – we went out and stepped on a few toes – some of the owners were upset about the programme, a few players got upset as well. The bottom line was they were paying the bills, so…'

It made it to episode 11 – which is more than many new US series are getting at the moment.

'They could have snatched it right off the air – it could have not made it to the air – it's surprising it made it that far,' says Omar.

The show took four months to film in Toronto, where it was not broadcast, so those involved were not aware quite how successful – or notorious – Playmakers had become.

'I only realised how upset they were when I was talking to the producers when it went off the air – they told me the NFL had always been against it. When they saw the beginning – when we were casting it – but I think especially when it was being shown and everyone was talking about it.'

He returned to his home in Los Angeles and was overwhelmed to see his face plastered on billboards.

'It gave us a lot of exposure as actors. A lot of people come up to me now and saying that they really enjoyed watching it – a lot of people are sad about it, but life goes on.'

Playmakers has been described as Nip/Tuck or Six Feet Under for sports. It is accessible and fascinating, even if you know nothing about American football – or indeed hate sports.

'That was our goal – to get people who weren't necessarily football fans, and especially women, to watch the show.'

He points out that there are more than a few shots of football players with their shirts off.

Many of the storylines are based on many real-life incidents. 'but not just from football. You'll hear Kobe Bryant mentioned – Jason Kent. Other sports – basketball, baseball. We tried not to make it seem like it was just NFL.'

Omar (Cuba Gooding Jr's little brother) has acted since childhood, mostly in comedy. When he was 13 he got a role in Hangin' With Mr Cooper (he played cocky neighbour Earvin Rodman).

He also starred in the second series of Zoe… alongside Selma Blair and Michael Rosenbaum (Lex from Smallville).

After all this levity he was pleased to get a more serious role. 'I finally get to do drama – show a different side in my acting.'

> 'THAT WAS OUR GOAL – TO GET PEOPLE WHO WEREN'T NECESSARILY FOOTBALL FANS, AND ESPECIALLY WOMEN, TO WATCH THE SHOW'

Up to now, he's usually played the good guy. DH is an ambiguous character. He is a star player, a role model, but has quite a few personal demons. It is a gritty part; he's a drug addict, egomaniac, both his parents were junkies who died of HIV-related illness.

Omar says: 'It was a challenge. Once I found exactly where I wanted the character to go – after episode two when I saw he was sort of the token bad guy.

'This guy has no respect for the law, let alone authority figures. He feels he can get away with what he wants – and he does. So it was really fun playing that.'

Omar says he found the physical training required to convincingly portray a professional athlete was tough but exciting. It gave him a chance to play out one of his childhood dreams.

The training helped him to develop his character. 'It was just getting the conditioning down – just the look and the attitude, how they walk, how they talk. Just trying to be that confident, cocky football player, a jock – a tough guy.'

He also realised how hard real sportsmen have to work to stay on top.

'I found a couple of challenges being an athlete. I was always a big guy, a good runner. But this challenge really pushed me – I was just an actor running a couple of takes – running here and there and I was sore.

'I found out all the tips I needed to find out how key stretching was – Epsom salts – the masseuse was my best friend by the end of the day' ■

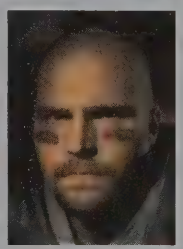
Playmakers is on FX from June

Star players

DH (Omar Gooding)
The Cougars' latest signing. A talented running back who knows he can get away with almost anything.

Eric Olczyk (Jason Matthew Smith)
In counselling after accidentally paralysing a player from an opposing team. Never wanted to be a football player and is only there as a tribute to his dead brother and to prove something to his abusive father.

Kelvin 'The Buffalo' James (Marcello Thedford)
Loyal to DH, but increasingly disillusioned by his friend's behaviour – especially as he seems to end up taking most of the flak.



Leon Taylor (Russel Hornsby)
Previously the Cougars' star player – but an injury forced him out. Now recovered, he returns to find DH has taken his place.

Head Coach Mike George (Tony Denison)
Not in the best of health, but fighting to keep his job safe. He is keen to help Leon, but knows the team's owners have their own agenda.

HOW WE RATE DIGITAL TV KIT

Every piece of kit tested in What Satellite & Digital TV is rated on:

Build: quality of construction and attractive design

Performance: quality of audio-visual output

Features: number and usefulness of extra features

Value: value for money

Some equipment is also rated on:

Setup: ease of use and time required to get started

Searching: speed and capability in searching for channels

Navigation: ease of organising channels or recordings in everyday use

Every piece of kit also gets an overall score based on its individual ratings and the reviewer's general opinion

Tired of Motty? Is ITV no longer on the ball? Then let Julian Clover guide you through the alternate guide to Euro 2004

With Euro 2004 coverage on both the BBC and ITV, it seems hard to believe that football fans would even contemplate the prospect of picking up the satellite remote and looking elsewhere, but when coverage from Portugal kicks off on June 12, those who do will be rewarded with additional coverage from Euro 1080, Eurosport and the public broadcaster members of the European Broadcasting Union.

The EBU pools the resources of broadcasters as diverse as Albania's TV Shqiptar and Germany's ZDF. The premise is that the larger broadcasters can then underwrite the less well-off stations and allow them to bring the key events to free-to-air television.

Even so, at £260million, the cost of securing the rights to the Euro footie-fest are not cheap. On top of this is the cost of covering the event itself and the distribution to the individual broadcasters. The host broadcaster for the event is EBS 2004, a joint venture between the Portuguese national broadcaster RTP and the EBU's other members in Portugal, which will distribute the signals via the EBU's satellite network on Eutelsat W1 and W3 at 10°E and 7°E respectively. Some broadcasters will have their presenters in the stadiums themselves, particularly when national pride is at stake, so it's possible that some feeds will pop up on other satellites.

The EBU uses MPEG 4:2:2 for its transmissions, which used to put reception of the raw feeds out of reach to all but the professional receivers costing thousands of pounds. Now you can harness the huge processing power of a home PC, using a PCI or USB satellite receiver and the freely available ProgDVB software (see panel).

It's also possible that some backhauls might appear in the clear. Check Eutelsat W2 (16°E), the Telecoms or Atlantic Birds 1 and 2 (5°W, 8°W and 12.5°W).

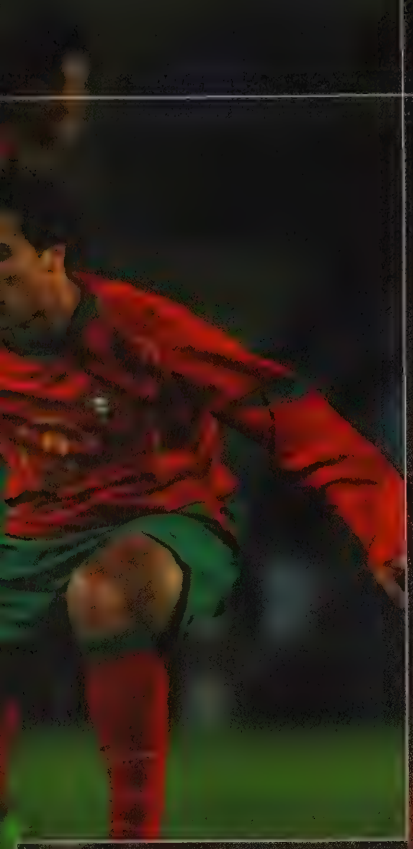
DOMESTIC BLISS

There's also a good chance that some of the domestic broadcasters that transmit signals internationally will carry live matches. According to the fixture lists this could mean the chance to watch alternative matches. For example, on June 23 when Germany meets the Czech Republic in Lisbon, at the same time Holland takes on Latvia in Braga.

German coverage of Euro 2004 is being shared between the country's two public broadcasters ARD (Das Erste) and ZDF. Both channels are available in analogue and digital on Astra at 19.2°E and, like most of the public broadcasters, transmit in the clear.

But there's the problem; sports rights are expensive and the last thing sports rights-holders want is satellite enthusiasts watching the matches on a channel other than the one intended for our nation. Many channels will have advertisers to please. It works both ways; advertisers would be less than happy if they

'BOTH CHANNELS ARE AVAILABLE IN ANALOGUE AND DIGITAL ON ASTRA AT 19.2°E, AND LIKE MOST OF THE PUBLIC BROADCASTERS TRANSMIT IN THE CLEAR'



British Eurosport – the fan's choice

Rather than buy its coverage direct from the EBU, British Eurosport has sub-licensed its pictures from the BBC.

It's pitching itself as the football fan's channel, with the matches that will offer the best football instead of stoking patriotic fervour. Although, with two quarter-finals, one semi-final and the final itself among Eurosport's live selection, you might well see the Three Lions in action live. British Eurosport has a further 10 live group matches, including such highlights as Spain vs Russia (June 12), Germany vs Holland (June 15), and Croatia vs France (June 17). All the other matches will be shown either delayed on the day of play, or repeated the following day.

With a continental range of Eurosport channels now in action, there will be no fewer than six Eurosport newsgathering teams in Portugal to discover the latest gossip and give a pan-European flavour of events outside the stadiums.

were to lose access to the 2.7million German digital homes, so it is unlikely that there will be any blackouts on Das Erste or ZDF. So be warned – channels like TVE Internaçional will be unlikely to screen any football, but expats of the soccer-crazy nation will probably be able to catch up on magazine shows.

Coverage from the Nordic broadcasters DR, TV2 (Denmark), SVT (Sweden), NRK (Norway) and YLE (Finland) will also be out of reach. These channels encrypt their broadcasts as part of the Viasat and Canal Digital packages. The same goes for the Benelux countries, which either encrypt or, in the case of the Belgian broadcasters, simply don't broadcast their domestic channels on satellite.

In France it's a different story. While the public broadcasters on Astra 1 and Hot Bird are encrypted as part of digital services Canal Satellite and TPS, the national broadcasters are still available in good old-fashioned Secam on Atlantic Bird 3 (5°W). France Television is sharing its coverage with TF1. The use of the French Secam system means that the pictures will appear to be in black and white, unless you have a suitable Secam/PAL decoder, or your TV set can handle transmissions from across the Channel. My Echostar AD3600IP is able to convert from Secam without difficulty.

Italy's RAI, in analogue and digital at 13°E, will be on in every Italian bar or restaurant. Be prepared in case the Italians are forced to turn on their wobbly encryption.

Eastern Europe and North Africa also offer some alternative channels to follow your team of choice. Canal Algerie is on Eutelsat W2 (16°E) as is Albania's TV Shqiptar.

As might be expected, Eurosport will offer extensive coverage of Euro 2004, but the cost of rights means that though British Eurosport will be carrying most events live (see boxout), the international feed on Astra 1 at 19.2°E will be restricted to showing delayed coverage.

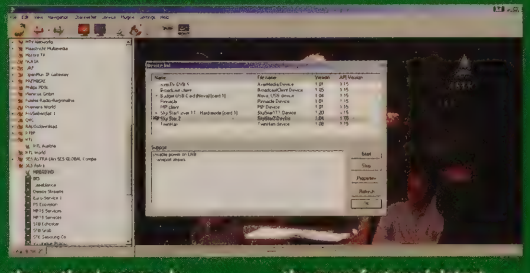
THE BIG PICTURE

But for the ultimate experience you need to watch Euro 2004 in high-definition. Europe's only HDTV channel Euro 1080 will be screening live matches on its cinema channel. Sadly, this means a trip to one of the selected theatres or outdoor venues in Germany, Spain and Belgium. Delayed coverage, again due to the cost of rights, will be available on Euro 1080's main channel to its current subscriber base of 6,000 homes. Euro 1080's communication manager Terry Verbiest says that with suitable TVs still relatively expensive, the €200 decoder cost and €65 two-year subscription is not a barrier to entry. 'It's important that we shift gears,' says Verbiest. 'At the moment we're in demonstration gear to see the quality of the system. Between now and September we really want to increase the quality of the programming.'

Euro 1080's sister company Alfacam is responsible for the production of all the matches. The production trucks will produce three separate feeds for broadcasters looking to transmit in regular 4:3, 16:9 widescreen and 16:9 hi-def. While few of us will be able to enjoy the hi-def transmissions this time around, all the matches will be captured in the format for posterity ■

MPEG 4:2:2 on your PC

Once the hidden realm of professional broadcasters, satellite enthusiasts can now pick up MPEG 4:2:2 using a £50 PCI card and the ProgDVB software. Even an average PC will work – anything above 700MHz with at least 128MB RAM (double that for Windows XP).



The software can be picked up freely from the ProgDVB website at www.progdvb.com, though it's a courtesy to make a small donation to further the author's research.

The Technisat Skystar 2 PCI card is recommended, but you'll find other kit listed on the site. Update the drivers to the manufacturer's latest release, and you should be able to tune in these highly compressed channels in no time at all.

The most complicated, and long-winded, satellite installation task is that of aligning a motorised multi-satellite dish. Although many motorised setups these days use a DiSEqC motor (which, as well as requiring considerably less wiring, is also somewhat easier to install), the conventional motorised mount is still the ultimate system.

DiSEqC motors are not so versatile – they cannot handle such large dishes, they are relatively slow to move from satellite to satellite, and they are more prone to confusion.

Conventional mounts are either horizon-to-horizon types or polar mounts. In effect, both come down to the same; the dish rotates (under control of a positioner unit inside) about an axis that is parallel to the Earth's polar axis, so it follows an imaginary arc in the sky directly above the Equator – the geostationary orbit where the satellites are to be found.

To arrange this the motorised mount's main axis of rotation is adjustable to a range of angles from the horizontal (the axis of inclination) and the whole mount can be rotated on the pole.

The only surprising element is what's known as the declination angle. This is the (small) angle that accounts for the fact that the satellites are not infinitely far away but 'only' 35,750km above the Earth. Without this correction, the dish would look off into empty space instead of slightly south to the geostationary satellites.

A typical polar mount looks something like figure 1. Horizon-to-horizon mounts are similar but their works are all enclosed inside a casing.

So to install a motorised mount, all you have to do is adjust the three angles – the axis inclination, the bearing to true south and the declination – to suit your exact location on the Earth's surface.

With all three angles accurately set, the dish will track the invisible satellite arc in the sky as near perfectly as possible.

It is a lengthy process, even for a professional with all the right equipment, and so fixing and aligning a motorised dish can cost several hundred pounds. But you can do it yourself. It will take longer and prove quite frustrating at times, but it can be done.

For this article, we'll assume that the mount is already fixed in position and the dish and LNB are in place. It's only the alignment that we will consider here. The one thing to know is that the pole on which the mount sits must be absolutely vertical. An accurate inclinometer is the best way to check this. A simple spirit level or plumb line won't normally do.

Poles which screw to a wall or to a solid base can be adjusted to compensate for non-vertical walls or non-level bases by inserting

Both offset and prime focus motorised dishes use the same inclination and declination angles to correctly view the satellites' arc

Installing a motorised dish

The whole heavens are yours with a motorised dish – once you have it accurately set up washers as shims between the mounting struts and the wall or base. A pole being concreted into the ground must be held precisely vertical as the concrete sets.

THE RIGHT ANGLES

Some mounts have the adjustable angles marked on parts of the mount or the casing. With others you will need to measure them with an inclinometer. Although this is easy with centre-feed dishes since it is clear where the dish is looking. For offset feed dishes you will need to refer to any angles marked on the dish mount or to the manufacturer's instructions.

Either way, although you want the initial angles set to be as accurate as possible, they will be adjusted by trial and error later.

The first angle to set is the axis inclination. This is the angle between the mount's axis of rotation and the horizontal.

The angle is nearly equal to the site's latitude (you can find this on an Ordnance Survey map). You can use this and fine-tune it later, but to be accurate you should add an offset, itself dependent on the latitude, according to figure 2. It depends how accurately the first approximation is set.

Most mounts have the rotational axis supported on a hinge and a threaded rod and by adjusting a stop on the rod, the angle of the axis can be varied. Some even have the site latitude marked on them to avoid consulting the graph at all. For those mounts without markings, you should use the inclinometer on a straight part of the rotational axis and adjust the angle accordingly.

Horizon-to-horizon mounts have the main axis hidden but they usually feature a flat surface at the top end of the axis. Use the inclinometer on this with a measurement of 90° minus the one calculated.

The next angle to set is the declination. This is also dependent on your latitude and can be read from figure 3.

The declination is often set with a screw stop. It's usually easiest to add the declination angle to the axis inclination angle and, with the dish in its apex (highest) position, make the declination adjustment by reading from the inclinometer the angle of the dish face itself.

Of course, it is most important to have set the axis inclination accurately first.

Finding the apex position is a matter of rotating the dish on its mount (either powering up the actuator with a positioner or disengaging the motor or actuator so the dish can be turned by hand) with the inclinometer on a straight edge vertically across the dish face.

Keep the inclinometer vertical as the dish is rotated and at the shallowest angle, the dish is in the apex position. Make sure this position is kept.

Again, many dishes are made with declination angles stamped on the mount next to the declination adjustment. This makes life easier. Some are even preset to a particular average declination – very easy but not so accurate.

FOLLOW THE SUN

The last setting is to rotate the mount on its pole so that the motorised axis runs exactly from true north to true south. You could use a compass for this but that only registers magnetic south and will not be accurate because of the iron in the pole and mount.

A good way to find south is to use the sun. At noon, the sun is due south at the Greenwich meridian (0° longitude). For each degree of longitude west of Greenwich, the sun is due south four minutes later. East, it's four minutes earlier. So you can calculate when the sun will be due south at the site by knowing the longitude. Remember to account for summer time – you must work to Greenwich Mean Time (GMT).

At the calculated time, with the dish locked in the apex position, rotate the whole mount on the pole until the shadow of the centre of the feed is exactly central across the dish. A bit of preparation (like getting it roughly right first and marking a central line on the dish) is a good idea.

The most accurate way to align the mount south is to use the satellites themselves. Unfortunately, there isn't always a satellite conveniently positioned due south from every spot on the Earth. Instead, we use a satellite far from south and a little maths!

The idea is to rotate the dish on its mount (under power from the positioner or by hand, with the motor disengaged) until its elevation angle is correct for the chosen satellite. Then the whole mount is rotated on the pole until that satellite is found. The mount is then pointing due South.

Astra 2 at 28.2°E is a good candidate because it is suitably placed and almost everyone wants to pick up signals from this satellite anyway (so if you can't get it, your dish needs to be moved!), but you can use another satellite if you prefer.

You can calculate the elevation required from the formula given in the article on installing a fixed dish (the April 2004 issue) or have it done for you by using proprietary software or products like Acusat (available from www.acusat.com) or Nova for Windows (download from www.nlsa.com).

It's easiest to use the dish face angle (measured by the vertical inclinometer across the dish face) rather than the elevation of the dish, and this will be 90° minus the calculated elevation. Swing the dish around its motorised axis to the left of the apex position as you stand behind it until the dish face angle is correct.

A finished offset motorised mount

Now with a receiver connected to the LNB and tuned to a suitable channel (Sky News at 12.207/V, SR 27500, FEC 2/3 is a good one), swing the whole mount around the pole until you get reception.

Peak the alignment (only by rotating the mount on the pole) using a signal level meter or the onscreen signal strength and quality displays. Lock off the pole clamp tightly when the signal is peaked.

In theory, you should now have the mount pointing perfectly south with the right axis inclination and declination angles to track the whole satellite arc with as good an accuracy as the polar mount will allow.

PEAK PRACTICES

However, inevitably at least one of the settings will not be spot-on. Some tweaking will be needed. This is the slowest part of the whole procedure – even if you have a spectrum analyser and digital satellite meter – but the more trouble you take over this part, the better the mount will track the arc and the better the reception of weaker satellites will be.

Take your time and do it slowly and surely over a period of days, determining the errors, making small corrections and then checking for more errors.

The technique is to see in which direction the dish is off the arc at different points along it. This information enables you to work out which of the three mount angles requires correction.

First pick three suitable satellites near the centre (south) and extreme ends (east and west) of the arc. Typical candidates might be Thor (1°W), Turksat 1C (42°E) and Telstar 11 (37.5°W).

If you are moving the dish under power from the positioner, then save the three positions so you can return to them again and again. If you have disengaged the motor and are turning the dish by hand, mark off the positions of the three satellites on the mount so you can easily find them again.

For each satellite, test whether the signal is stronger when the dish is pointed a little up or a little down. Don't actually change the mount settings to do this, just gently pull on the rim of the dish to move it slightly up and down.

Use a signal meter or the onscreen displays to see in which direction the dish must be pulled to increase the signal at each reference point.

Figure 4 shows the various possibilities and the corrections to make. Don't overdo the corrections or you will never home in on the right settings. Make very fine adjustments to the settings and take your time, and you will end up with an accurate tracking of the arc.

There's no denying that this is a time-consuming and often frustrating business. But it is the best way to ensure that your dish is accurately tracking the satellite arc – and that means you are getting the maximum amount of signal from each satellite, and so picking up the maximum number of satellites and channels. And in the end, that's what it's all about ■

Technomate TM-5500DAPCI

Go, spoil yourself. The 'APCI' tagged on to the Technomate TM-5500DAPCI stands for 'analogue, positioner, common interface'.

This is a luxury model for the enthusiast, capable of picking up analogue and digital channels, driving a big dish on a traditional 36V motor, and it has a twin common interface for pay-TV. On top of that, it's as easy to use as the rest of the TM-5500 range, with lots of navigation features, special controls for inclined orbit motors, lots of AV connections, USALS, and pretty good pictures to boot. The £209 price tag is icing on the cake.

How can I get... German channels?

A new monthly series showing you how to pick up TV channels from Europe and beyond. This month's stop: Germany

Germany pretty much pioneered direct-to-home satellite TV in Europe, so it's no surprise that there are more than 80 digital TV channels German beaming from Astra 1 to German homes.

What makes Germany unusual is that more than 60 of these channels are free-to-air, including seven national entertainment channels, such as ARD Das Erste, 3sat, Pro Sieben and RTL.

On top of this, you've got sports channels like DSF and Eurosport, arts and culture channels like Arte and Eins Festival, news and current affairs channels like N-TV and Phoenix, children's channels, shopping and more.

Finally, there are around 20 regional TV channels broadcasting on satellite, so you can keep in touch with what's happening in any part of Germany from anywhere in Europe.

These figures don't even include the German-language channels aimed at Austria and Switzerland, which include specialised versions of the major German channels RTL and ProSieben.

Germany's love affair with satellite began in analogue, when broadcasters realised the new (and relatively affordable) technology was just the ticket for spanning a reunited Germany. The new satellites at 19.2°E arrived at just the right time, and satellite receivers soon became ubiquitous.

When digital satellite arrived, most channels took to the new format, along with a multitude of new arrivals, and the low cost of digital satellite receivers has assured its dominance.

As a hangover from this, there are still more than 30 free-to-air analogue German channels on Astra 1 because some five million homes have yet to go digital. There's no timetable to switch off analogue satellite, especially with cheap analogue receivers still on sale in Lidl and Aldi.

German professionalism means that almost all German channels broadcast a full seven-day programme listing on the standard DVB EPG, making it very easy to find out what's on (if you can read German).

The kit: a free-to-air digital receiver, 60cm dish aimed at Astra 1 fitted with a universal LNB. These cost under £150 today ■

Premiere

With so many free TV channels, it's not surprising pay-TV is nowhere near as popular in Germany as it is in the rest of Europe.

Premiere was the first digital TV subscription service in Europe, but it's struggled with both piracy and bad management, and nearly went out of business a couple of years ago. It's since turned around, and is getting new subscribers.

The line-up is standard – some sports, Discovery, Disney, movie channels, music, classic crime and soaps, Sci-Fi, a DIY channel and pay-per view movies. There are also no less than seven softcore adult channels.

- The kit: A satellite receiver with built-in Betacrypt, available from Galaxis, Humax Kathrein and Technisat. These aren't sold in the UK, so you'll need to import one from Germany for €250 (£167) or more. You'll also need a 60cm dish aimed at Astra 1, 19.2°E, fitted with a universal LNB, around £60.
- The cost: Subscriptions range from €5 (£3) to €43 (£30) per month, but you'll have to subscribe through a German address, so you'll need to find a dealer in Germany who'll do this for you. They can be found on the internet using Google, but expect to pay for the year upfront, with a premium for their work.

Across the Channel

ASTRA UK HIGHLIGHTS SOME CHANNELS DESERVING YOUR ATTENTION AT 28°E

Although Europe is now officially bigger than ever before (since European Union enlargement on May 1), in Britain we still know relatively little of our neighbours, and even less of their languages. Satellite TV from Astra provides a chance to learn more of both.

FRENCH

TV5 Europe represents the French on Astra 28°E (say 'TV Cinq' and not 'TV Five'!). The channel is a consortium of French-language channels from France, Belgium, Switzerland, Africa, and elsewhere – each contributing programmes to the international channels (there are different versions in different regions of the world).

There is a lot of news on TV5 as each partner channel contributes its own bulletins. Some of this is very locally oriented, but programmes such as the daily Journal Televise TV5 and the weekly Envoye Special present a more international view.

It's not all news. There are documentaries, especially about life in the different French-speaking regions of the world, and many discussion shows (it seems the French love to voice their opinions). And there are several game shows (catch Des Chiffres Et Des Lettres every weekday for a French Countdown).

The evenings see dramas and films, from a police drama set on the streets of Paris, to sweeping historical sagas set during the French Revolution. TV5 is an excellent source of films, and sport too gets a lot of airtime, with live coverage of the likes of the Tour de France, the UEFA cup, the Six Nations, and tennis.

GERMAN

Deutsche Welle started life as a radio service in 1953 and when DW-TV launched in 1992 it broadcast by satellite for just a few hours a day. Today, DW-TV is a 24-hour service seen around the world.

News is the backbone of DW-TV. Every hour, every day, is Journal, the half-hour news programme with coverage of politics, business, sport, and culture with a Teutonic slant. Journal only leaves gaps of 30 minutes between bulletins, and many of these are taken up with more news – such as Politik Aktuell with political news, Kultur.21 with arts news, Europa Aktuell with Brussels news, Projekt Zukunft with science news, and Auto Motor und Sport TV with car news. Alternate Journals are in English and many of DW-TV's other shows are made in English and German versions.

And there is some light relief. There are soft documentaries such as Im Focus and travel-ogue shows such as Schätze der Welt, and Gute Reise TV. Highlight of the day is Euromaxx – every single day of the year – it's a magazine show of armchair tourism, quaint customs around the world and entertainment news.

SPANISH

Links with news station Canal 24 Horas means that TVE Internacional has about six news shows a day: Telediario Matinal, Telediario-1, Telediario-2 and Telediario Internacional, not to mention the round-up show Panorama (no relation) at the weekend.

The rest of TVEi programming is similar to a UK terrestrial channel – sitcoms, films, dramas – but there's a lot of current affairs and even an hour of arts (Gente) every weekday evening, and it's Sunday mornings rather than Saturdays that see the kids monopolise TVEi with cartoons and pop.

On weekday afternoons there are more cartoons, kids' dramas and the maniacal Los Lunnis singing and puppet show – but only after soaps, Destino de mujer and Luna Negra have provided two hours of Latin passion. Cooking shows are another feature of daytime and game shows pop up all over the schedule.

The weekend afternoons are given over to documentaries and DIY shows, with a Spanish film most Saturdays, but there's surprisingly little sport on TVEi. 'Futbol' gets an occasional look-in – usually in the middle of the night!

PORTUGUESE

You may learn Portuguese from Record International Europe but you'll see nothing of Portugal. Record TV comes to 28°E from Sao Paulo in Brazil.

There's a tour, of sorts, every weekday at 11.00am. Sao Paulo no Ar is live (Ao vivo) from Record TV's helicopter as it swoops around Sao Paulo presenting news like an all-action block-buster. A more conventional bulletin is the nightly Jornal da Record, anchored by the serious Boris Casoy.

At the other extreme, Eliana's morning children's show has everything from performing poodles to boys vs girls games. Eliana will keep the dads watching too – as will the football coverage.

Each day there's over two hours of Note & Anote (a sort of Pebble Mill with infomercials), reality TV, game shows and two daily soap operas (Estrela, de Fogo and Metamorphoses).

But Record TV is a strange (to us) mix of the gaudy and godly. Late evening and early morning sees a stream of shows to dissect, discuss, and reinforce viewers' faith and spirituality (including Conexao Londres by phone from Kilburn!). Breakfast TV on Record TV means Em que posso te ajudar – 85 minutes of phone-in, dispensing spiritual advice against a backdrop of relaxing scenery.

As all these channels are part of the Sky Digital EPG, you have ready access to what's on for seven days at a time, with no need to hunt through foreign newspapers. And if your grasp of the language isn't all it could be, the programme info banners displayed with the 'i' key on the Sky remote have translations. Easy – or 'C'est simple comme bonjour', as they say on TV5 ■

Humax DV-1100S

GEOFF BAINS IS CAUGHT BETWEEN DISC AND DISH FOR HIS DIGITAL ENTERTAINMENT

Convergence seems to be the name of the name these days, and Humax is playing to win with the DV-1100S, a digital free-to-air receiver (with common interface for encrypted channels) with a built-in DVD player.

That's two sources of digital programming with only one box, and one set of cables to your TV and sound system – which has to be a good idea.

This is a handsome box, albeit a rather large one. There's no real reason why it should be as big as a VCR, but it is. It's robustly made with a strong metal chassis and case, and set off by the smart acrylic and silver front panel.

This, with its tiny chrome ball buttons, does look rather nice. Despite having far more front panel buttons than most receivers (there's the control of the DVD to think about), the DV-1100S still manages to keep the front panel sparse.

The DVD disc tray is in the centre (above a display shared by DVD and satellite sections) and on the right hand side there's a well-hidden flap that folds down to reveal two common interface sockets for conditional access modules (CAMs).

The remote control is also bursting with buttons as it serves two masters. One unusual button switches between DVD and satellite TV. Strangely, there is no front panel equivalent and, although you can switch from satellite to DVD by pressing the front panel Play button, you can go the other way without the remote.

The back panel of the DV-1100S is also largely empty. This is partly because there is no aerial loopthrough on this receiver. It's no great loss – it's better to connect to a TV with Scart. However, it denies the opportunity to easily feed the signals around the home to other TVs.

'Pictures from this receiver are definitely at the top of the quality tree – always bright and sharp with minimal noise'

Setup

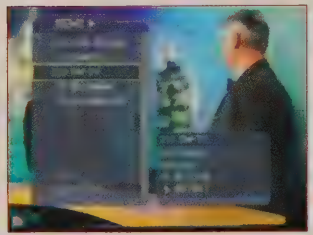
When first switched on, the DV-1100S introduces you to its bright, easy-to-use, icon-strewn menu system, and takes you through an installation wizard – setting the language you speak, the region of the world you're in, the satellite and LNB details and then searching for channels.

This process is easy, but it copes with only the simplest system and gives no search options, but you can return and alter all that later. And return you must – to set up each LNB in a multi-feed system (the DV-1100S can use full or mini-DiSEqC and it has a signal detection screen for aligning the dish), or start from scratch with a motorised system.

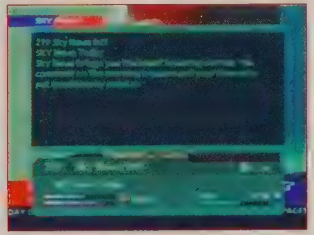
The DV-1100S will handle DiSEqC 1.2 or USALS motors and there are menus to set your longitude and latitude (for USALS), choose a satellite and a transponder and move the dish while checking the signal level and quality.

Strangely, the menu to set the dish limits is almost hidden away, when it should be the first thing you do.

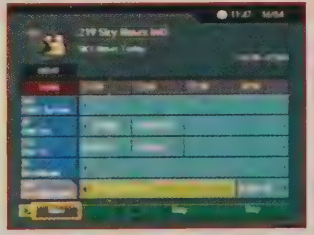
With the satellites found, the DV-1100S can search for all channels, just TV or radio, or just FTA or scrambled. As is usual, you can search a single transponder or the whole satellite. You can also edit down a satellite's transponder list



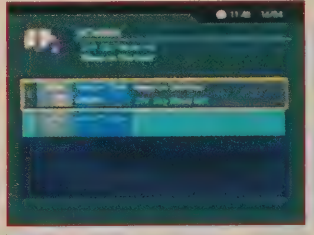
Up to five favourite channel lists are available



You can call up extended programme info



Set up to a week's listings on the EPG



Set timers manually or direct from the EPG to create a new list to search. This is useful if you want to regularly check a handful of transponders for feeds, without bothering with all the unchanging channels.

The DV-1100S managed to search all transponders on Astra 1 in a little under five minutes – a middle-of-the-road speed.

The receiver's stored database of transponder details for searches can be edited – adding new transponders, deleting them, or changing the values stored (frequency, polarity, symbol rate and FEC) – when it becomes outdated.

Navigation

Filling the DV-1100S's 4,000 channels is remarkable easy (especially with a motorised system), thanks to the thousands of TV and radio channels broadcasting from Astra 1 and Hot Bird. The channels are arranged in lists. All the channels found go into one list for TV and one for Radio, but they can also be accessed through further lists according to the channels' satellite or their scrambling system.

Then there's the five renameable favourite channel lists (up to 100 channels each). These can be filled with channels from the TV and Radio lists or, when watching a channel, you can elect to include it in a favourite list then.

The lists can be re-ordered and individual channels deleted or renamed. The DV-1100S can be set so that using the CH+ and CH- buttons stays within the current list, or stepping through the channels always accesses the whole TV and Radio lists.

A list can be browsed onscreen, and as the cursor is moved through it, a side window displays the highlighted channel's name, number, satellite, and the current programme name and times (if it or its network has been previously visited to access the data). Pressing OK selects that channel to watch.

This is a simple system to learn and use, and once set up with suitable favourite selections, it makes accessing thousands of channels remarkably straightforward.

When a channel is selected, an information plate is displayed giving the name, number, time, now-and-next programme information and progress bar, the satellite or channel list, and icons for encryption, teletext (re-inserted into the video signal), subtitles, Dolby Digital sound, and whether the channel is locked, withheld by censorship, or reserved as a timer event. The programme synopsis is displayed by pressing the i button.

The EPG display gives programme names across a grid of times for five channels (adjacent in the current list) at once. The programme details can be opened with the 'i' button, you can search for a programme by name and set the event timer directly from the EPG (and manually too).

Performance

The DV-1100S puts up an impressive display. Pictures from this receiver are definitely at the top of the quality tree – always bright and sharp with minimal noise. The colours are a little over saturated, but that's nothing that a TV adjustment cannot handle.

Sound is excellent too with little hiss or noise introduced by the receiver.

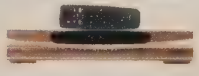
No UHF output. Over-simple installation wizard.

THE OPPOSITION

Apro CI2002
Similar price when bundled with a cheap DVD player, but no USALS, no component or S-video, and no proper event timer



Pixx ADT3500
Similar specification receiver without USALS or component video output but with lacklustre DVD player built-in and far more expensive

Force DVD-Master 2044S
Similar quality DVD player built-in and with superior specification satellite receiver but at twice the price

'A button on the remote switches over to DVD and the front panel display then comes alive with the DVD symbols and indicators'

Features

Like many other digital receivers, the DV-1100S has a freeze frame facility and it also has a complex parental lock system. This not only locks out a channel (unless a PIN is entered) but it can deny access to a programme depending on its age rating, and you can even block access to any channels outside set times.

You can also set the receiver to switch on and off at a preset time everyday – like some kind of overly complicated alarm clock.

The DV-1100S also puts four basic arcade games at your disposal, but with satellite TV and DVDs, it's unlikely you'll be so pushed for entertainment that you'll need to resort to them.

And that's the most important other feature of the DV-1100S – the DVD player. Functionally, this is entirely separate from the receiver. A button on the remote switches over to DVD and the front panel display then comes alive with the DVD symbols and indicators.

Switching back to satellite stops a DVD playing. Annoyingly, every time you switch on or switch over to satellite, the DV-1100S has to load up certain software from one part of its memory to another, taking several seconds – so you cannot easily hop back and forth between the media.

All the basic control of the unit is handled from within the satellite section. When switched to DVD mode, all the DV-1100S does is play DVDs. And it does a pretty good job, too.

Although DVD purists would undoubtedly argue that this is no top-end player, neither is it deserving of a low-end placing either. Pictures are on par with any mid-price player, as is the Dolby Digital sound.

The DV-1100S's DVD section provides all the normal functionality of a DVD player, too. Some DVD players built into other equipment skimp on some of the more obtuse controls but the DV-1100S managed all aspects of a Walking With Beasts DVD that was positively bristling with interactivity, without difficulty.

As well as DVDs, the DV-1100S can play CD, VCD, SVCD and MP3 discs and all the -R, +R and RW variations of CDs and DVDs.

All of which adds up to a very capable machine. However, the DV-1100S is on sale at a price of £179. Even supposing that just £50 of that can be attributed to the DVD player (and it's unlikely that a DVD player costing £50 would be as good) then you're forking out just £130 for the satellite receiver.

And the DV-1100S is worth more than that. It produces excellent quality pictures and sound and, apart from the lack of UHF loopthrough, provides good connectivity.

It's reasonably simple to set up and to keep up-to-date with channel changes, and better than many at helping you finding the channel you want to watch. There are no CAMs but the two common interface slots provide for encrypted reception as well.

As a source of so much digital entertainment, the DV-1100S is certainly worth considering ■

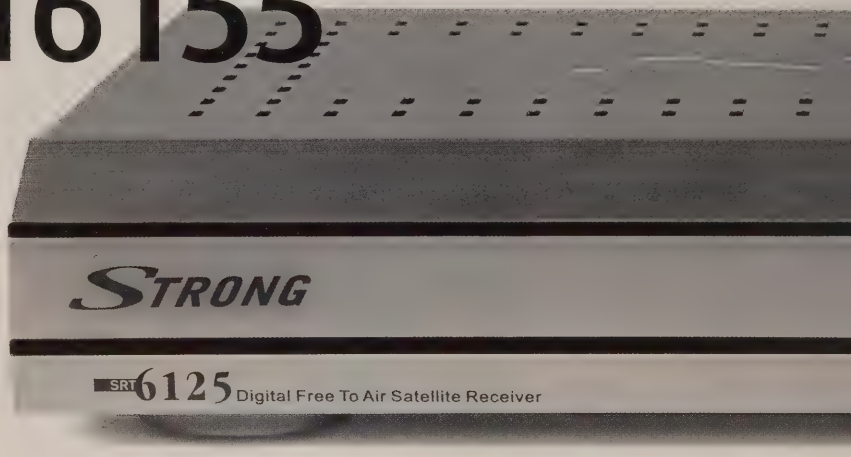
Strong SRT6125 and SRT6155

THERE ARE A FEW WEAKNESSES IN THE LATEST FREE-TO-AIR SATELLITE RECEIVERS FROM THE STRONG FAMILY, AS ALEX LANE IS SURPRISED TO FIND



Strong has been a satellite TV brand for more than 10 years, but its profile in the UK has been erratic. But we've always got time for the company which made such exciting receivers as the SRT4375.

Now we have the SRT6125 and SRT6155 – two free-to-air receivers that are based on the same chassis and use the STi 5518 chipset, which is becoming almost ubiquitous.

The difference between the two is price; the SRT6155 has a modulated UHF output, a four-digit front panel LED display, and an infrared extender which the SRT6125 lacks. This makes about a £30 difference to the cost, and most people will find both the display and UHF output superfluous.

They're otherwise identical: slim and compact, silver-grey receivers, with the Strong badge embossed on the top panel. The white central strip on the fascia can be swapped for a range of colour strips to match your décor.

The remote control is a slim unit that is clearly labelled and responsive. The SRT6155 comes with a universal remote control that can control your TV, VCR, DVD player and another set-top box (this is available for the SRT6125, but doesn't come as standard).

Strong's menu design is fairly traditional, with set of five options in the Main Menu, another list of four in the PIN-protected Installation menu and various sub-menus.

Setup

Stepping through the various installation menus, you'll soon have the outputs configured for your TV, then you can make your LNB choices. The SRT6100 can handle 16 fixed LNBs using DiSEqC 1.1 and you can choose from a range of Ku-band or C-band LNB types, or set up your own. The receivers can also control a basic DiSEqC 1.2 motorised mount, although there's no auto-positioning or USALS software.

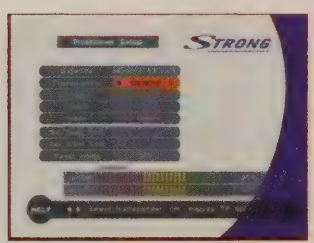
'The autosearch is satisfyingly fast, completing Hot Bird in under five minutes and displaying a running list of TV and radio channels found'

DiSEqC motors use the standard 32 positions, and each one has to be set manually. You can change which transponder you want to look for at any time, and there's a sensitive onscreen signal strength and quality meter. The whole DiSEqC control system is limited to a single menu, with support for movement limits and a command to send the dish to its central 'zero' position.

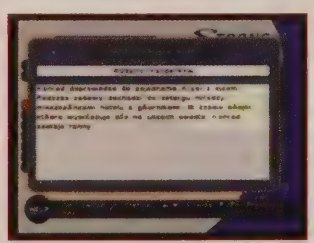
The receivers' databases contain 64 satellites, encompassing every TV bird in orbit before the last software release in October 2003. The last 10 slots are empty, so the list can be updated. Adding new transponders is easy, allowing new locations to be built up, and frequencies can be repeated with different symbol rates for feed-hunting.

Searches can be for all channels or just free-to-air signals, with an optional network search to find new transponders from network instructions. There's also a network scan to look for transponders operated by the same broadcaster, a single transponder search, and individual channels can be added by PIDs.

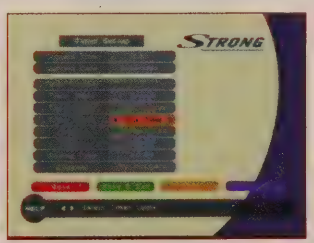
The autosearch is fast, completing Hot Bird in under five minutes while displaying a running list of TV and radio channels found. The 2MB flash memory should be enough for 4,000 channels, but there is no way to check how much memory is being used. You can also search only one satellite at a time, even if you've saved dozens of positions already.



Only basic DiSEqC motor control is provided



Extended programme information is available, if it's broadcast



Coloured function buttons enhance menu control

Three games are included. Time Strong could have spent elsewhere

+ Universal remote control, easy setup

− No USALS support, poor picture

TV and radio channels are automatically separated and the Channel Organizer menu is used to sort them by name, encryption status, transponder frequency, or in your own order. There are also four favourites menus, pre-titled Movie, News, Sport and Music. Channels can be deleted, names edited, PIN-locked, and you can set the receiver to skip them if you're just surfing through.

The channel list can only be edited in the Channel Organizer menu. It would have been nice to be able to sort the channels on the fly.

The onscreen list always shows the current channel's frequency and satellite. Channels can be identified through the info banner, which displays the time, name, number, audio, scrambling and teletext options. A second press of the info button shows tuning details and a signal meter.

Performance

Once more, the STi5518 chipset shows that it can produce quality pictures, but there are surprising levels of pixellation on low-contrast black areas, and some fringing on large blocks of colour which we haven't seen in most other receivers based on this hardware.

This isn't surprising on low-rate channels but it was surprising to see it on RAI, Arte, and ARD, which have broadcast at high bandwidths. This is a disappointment.

Audio quality provides no such disappointments, especially using the digital audio output, where it's only limited by the quality of the broadcast.

Features

The full-screen EPG can display up to seven days of data, either showing the next seven programmes for one channel, or a three-hour slice for seven channels at once. You can also access extended information if it is available, and set up to eight event timers.

The timers can be set manually or by highlighting an EPG event, and you can have either standard 'interval' timers or wake and sleep timers to turn the receiver on and off. Teletext is available through the built-in decoder, or you can use your TV to access it.

There are also three games – versions of Tetris, Sokoban and Snake. The time spent on these could definitely have been better applied elsewhere.

The SRT6125 and SRT6155 are not an auspicious return for Strong. It's a marque we expect to supply crystal-clear pictures and plenty of features, but these receivers don't even offer a basic standard of performance ■

Amstrad DRX180 Sky Plus

PACE NO LONGER HAS THE SKY PLUS MARKET ALL TO ITSELF. GEOFF BAINS LOOKS AT AMSTRAD'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE GENRE

The Sky Plus idea, launched in 2001, has sold over 250,000 of the combined PVR-Digibox receivers, and it's been a success. So much so that the original sole source for the hardware, Pace, has now been joined by Amstrad. Like all Sky Digital products, the Sky Plus is effectively made under license by Amstrad to Sky's specs, so don't expect to see anything vastly different in the DRX180 – except the outward design and the name on the back.

Even the DRX180's looks are familiar. If you can't place where you've seen this design before, then take a look at the latest Pace 3100 Sky Plus receiver – in a mirror. The DRX180's front panel is almost exactly a mirror image of the Pace machine, right down to where the logos are placed. It has the same bevel-topped light-grey fascia and rounded buttons, chrome in the middle for the 'motor' controls and grey for the receiver functions.

The arrangement of small indicator lights either side of the (wonderful!) moving circular display are not mirrored from the Pace but otherwise everything is reversed.

The DRX180 is well made with a strong, heavily slotted metal case and an air of classiness. On the back panel, although the same sockets are there as on the Pace (Sky's spec, again) the arrangement is all Amstrad's own. The DRX180 also has a fan at the back to keep its computer innards cool– and it's quiet.

The Philips-made remote control is exactly the same as both previous Sky Plus machines.

The DRX180 records broadcasts as digital data streams on its hard drive, and the DRX180 has the same 40GB capacity drive as the two previous Pace models. That will store about 20 hours of TV programming. It's a shame that Amstrad/Sky couldn't have taken the opportunity of a new model from a new manufacturer to up this a bit. Still, there's nothing to stop you upgrading the drive yourself to twice or three times the capacity.

And it could do with some extra storage capacity. The DRX180 implements all of the latest Sky Plus features, such as the ability to record two different channels at once, to buffer all 'live' TV for instant replay, and to save paused TV for viewing later. All these desirable features have the downside of encouraging you to use up the hard disc space even faster.

The EPG is one of the Digibox's best features and the way in which the Sky Plus EPG extensions blend in with the original non-recording version make this Sky Plus, like the others, easy to take to and a cinch to use.

The main surprise is that the DRX180 does not really perform any differently to the original Pace Sky Plus. Most Digiboxes improve on previous models in terms of speed of access to menus and EPG listings. The DRX180 is not noticeably faster. However, it is a joy to handle and produces pictures and sound as good as any we've seen from Sky Digital – whether live, delayed a few minutes or recorded last month.

The Amstrad DRX180 adds no more functionality to Sky Plus and little in styling, but now the Sky Plus notion is catching on – and Sky has removed the £10/month subs obstacle for Sky World subscribers – it is likely that a lot more viewers will soon enjoy pausing live TV, recording from the EPG without tape, and watching recordings from the start before they've finished ■

Elgato EyeTV 400

JIM HILL HAS HIS EYE ON ELGATO'S DIGITAL TV TUNER/RECORDER FOR MAC USERS

Adding TV functionality to a computer isn't a new idea; there are dozens of windows-based TV tuner cards out there costing as little as £49, but Elgato has taken the idea a step further. For a start, the EyeTV 400 is the first Mac-compatible (in fact, its Mac-only) TV adapter. Secondly, it uses a digital terrestrial TV tuner (DVB-T) that can deliver all of the Freeview TV and radio channels. And thirdly, it is also a PVR (personal video recorder) with an EPG (electronic programme guide) that uses the Mac's own hard drive to time-shift and store recorded material.

Conceived by Munich-based outfit Elgato Systems, Eye TV 400DVB is rather like a very simple Freeview set-top-box. There's not much inside the slim silver A5-size case besides the digital tuner and little in the way of rear-panel connectivity. Just a UHF socket and a Firewire port in fact, but that's what makes the EyeTV 400 such an elegant solution. It basically harnesses the processing power and memory of your Mac in order to function. This also means, of course, that it's very light and portable and works particularly well on the road with a Powerbook or a new G4-powered iBook.

The downside, though, is that it's rather demanding; you'll need to ensure your Mac is up to it before you try one. It requires at least a 500MHz G4 running OSX10.2.8 with about 256MB of RAM. You'll also need an internet connection to get the EPG, and a Firewire port.

Getting started is easy. That Firewire connection draws power from the computer, so there's no mains plug. Just plug in the portable aerial (included), load the EyeTV software, wait for the auto-tune programme to find and sort the channels and click on the EyeTV icon on the desktop. The user interface is as friendly and intuitive as we have come to expect of an OSX application with familiar graphics and menus. A basic remote control is included too, making your computer feel much more like a TV.

Simply click on a channel to watch it, click record to record it, pause to pause live TV, hit guide for channel info and so on. Recorded material can be edited more precisely than any set-top PVR can manage by using a mouse to splice timelines and chop segments. All the recorded material is stored on your hard drive and can be labelled or deleted. To be able to pause live TV a buffer of about two hours is recorded on to your hard drive anyway, which is why you need so much free RAM. Roxio's Toast Titanium 6 is recommended for shifting your recordings to disc, but any recorder will do.

EyeTV uses MPEG-2 compression to process the video signal – much like DVD – and the picture quality is extremely good. A direct comparison with a regular Freeview box showed marked improvements in stability, contrast and level of detail. An under-specified Mac, however, will not cope and you'll get jerky playback and loss of audio sync.

For an EPG, the EyeTV logs on to an excellent website called tvtv.co.uk, which displays all of the Freeview channels plus masses of additional information about each of the programmes. This is another advantage over a set-top-box arrangement.

Like all Mac products, there is a premium to pay and the price seems a little steep, given how simple the hardware is. However, it works beautifully with a powerful Mac and PC users will be green with envy ■

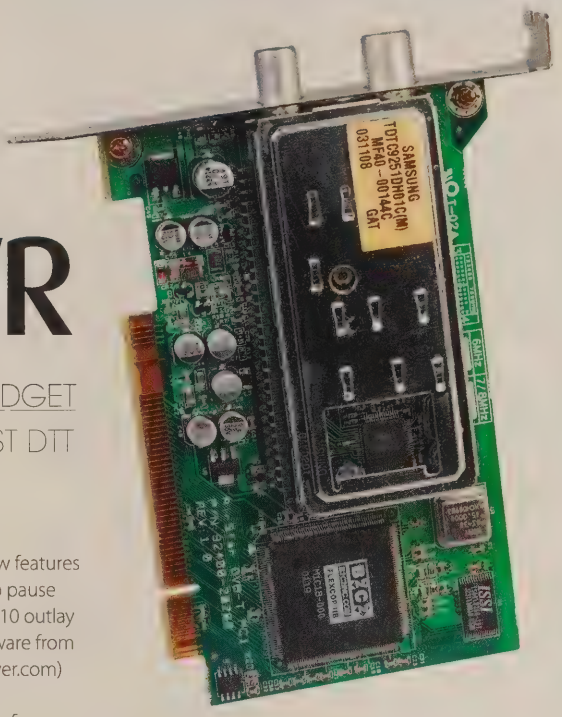
Technisat Airstar 2 TV PVR

TECHNISAT HAS A REPUTATION FOR MAKING GREAT BUDGET SATELLITE PC CARDS. GRANT RENNELL SEES IF ITS LATEST DTT CARD LIVES UP TO THE PROMISE



Technisat's Skystar 2 PVR card proved to be an inexpensive and reliable satellite PC card with some great software bundled in, rightly garnering first place in our Hardware Awards last issue. The Airstar 2 is a digital terrestrial PCI card (Sat Europa also sells a USB box equivalent) based on the same B2CE chipset as the Skystar and coming with much the same software. So, does it deserve the same praise?

Neither the box or card come with a remote control, although Sat Europa will sell you one for an extra £19. There's no common interface slot for potential use with Top-Up TV either.

Predictably for a budget card, connections are also fairly streamlined. You won't find inputs suitable for video-capturing from an external source, but the handy inclusion of a UHF output alongside the aerial input means the card can be used to output programmes to a TV or record them using a VCR.

Installing the card is a straightforward, hassle-free process, and operating it is just as easy using two separate applications – Setup4PC and the DVB viewer.

Setup4PC is where the basic tuning and retuning takes place, though you can also locate channels from within the DVB viewer. Located channels are listed in the Program (sic) management menu, where you can rename them and manually tweak technical info including PIDs. The Status menu is where, among other things, you can check signal quality for individual channels and which transmitter you are receiving.

The Airstar 2's tuner made an efficient job of locating all available channels in our average signal area. The job of watching and recording them is handled by the excellent DVB viewer.

The version bundled here lacks a few features such as DVD playback and the ability to pause and resume live TV, though a modest £10 outlay will buy you the full version of the software from the DVB viewer website (www.dvbviewer.com) which does include these.

The Channel list can be used to scan for channels, which are listed by provider and can also be renamed. The EPG lists TV and radio channels on the left-hand side with now-and-next info for the selected channel on the right.

Recording is handled in three different ways. You can click on the manual record icon on the main screen and there's a manual timer option, but the simplest option for scheduling a recording is by clicking on a programme in the EPG and selecting 'send to PVR', which adds the programme to the timer list.

The DVB viewer records in broadcast quality MPEG2 (around 1.7GB of space is required an hour) and the viewer can be set to automatically split recordings when you reach a specified file size – useful if you intend to copy a programme on to disc.

There's a choice of 4:3, letterboxed 16:9 and 14:9 aspect ratios, together with three levels of zoom a full-screen option, and a desktop TV mode which has the viewer running in the background as a 'wallpaper' replacement.

Picture quality is exceptionally crisp, and the card ran very smoothly on the test PC (an Athlon 2100XP with 512MB RAM).

Although the lack of a timeshifting option does undermine the PVR tag slightly, if you're looking for a simple, value-for-money method of recording and watching of DTT channels on your PC, then the Airstar 2 fits the bill ■

'Installing the card is a straightforward, hassle-free process, and operating it is just as easy'

Ulti-mate CAM

A FULLY LICENSED MULTI-CRYPT CAM WITH FREE ADULT TV ACCESS? WE CHECK OUT THE ULTI-MATE

Joker CAM, Magic CAM, Global CAM – conditional access modules which can work with several types of encryption have been a big hit over the past couple of years. With the software from several encryption systems built in (usually Irdeto, Viaccess and Seca Mediaguard), they've made it easy for users of pirate satellite TV cards to programme one card with the keys to several packages, all using different types of encryption.

Recently, some of the most common encryption formats – notably Irdeto and Viaccess – have been improved out of range of the hackers recently. This won't last forever, but as the majority of broadcasters move to the latest encryption it has limited the usefulness of the multi-crypt CAMs.

An official multi-crypt CAM is a different matter, but rivalry between the different CA companies has always prevented this. Now Turbosat and SCM – a major CAM manufacturer – have convinced Irdeto and Conax to sit together on one CAM. Turbosat has also thrown in four months of access to four hardcore adult channels in a package that costs just £119.

A pair of CAMs for Irdeto and Conax will set you back more than £150, so the Ulti-mate is a bargain if that's all you want.

FEATURES

Product: Ulti-mate CAM
Price: £119
Features: Irdeto 2 and Conax CAM, four-month access to Don't Panic, Sex View, Sex View Plus and 247-Sex TV
Contact: Turbosat
Website: www.ulti-mate-cam.com
Tel: 07077 868686

The four adult channels may be an even stronger enticement to many. Don't Panic, Sex View, Sex View Plus and 247-Sex TV all broadcast 24-hour schedules of adult films on Hot Bird. They claim to have a wide range of titles to play out, and something to suit all tastes, although that's par for the course with any adult TV channel.

The channels are easy enough to get at – just insert the Ulti-mate CAM without a viewing card, and enter the PIN number. Then tune into one of the four channels and wait for the CAM to pick up an activation signal. This can take several hours, so don't expect to be enjoying yourself straight away.

The channels remain active for four months, although you may need to re-activate the CAM if you don't tune into the channels for a week or so. The free channels are over-ridden if you insert a viewing card, and return automatically when the card is removed.

It may not be the foremost concern to anyone watching adult TV, but Don't Panic, Sex View, Sex View Plus and 247-Sex TV are not high-quality channels. Films are obviously played out from standard retail VHS tapes rather than any sort of broadcast master tape, and the audio quality is often as lo-fi as the grainy picture. You get what you pay for.

At £119, you're not paying much, and if you just want an introduction to adult TV, it's a good deal. You can always use it with an official card for Sex View, Sex View Plus or 247-Sex TV, which are encrypted in Irdeto 2 ■

Archsat Multisource Selector

IT'S A REMOTE CONTROL AV SELECTOR WITH A UHF MODULATOR. CAN ARCHSAT TIDY UP YOUR AV SPAGHETTI NIGHTMARE?

It's a fact of life for home entertainment enthusiasts that TVs just don't have enough AV inputs. Most have just one or two, and even a £1,000 TV might only have three sets. It's even more tricky if you only want Scart inputs, but that's often the case, so it's not surprising we've reviewed a few boxes that are solely designed to provide all of you home entertainment devices with a single output to the TV.

Archsat's Multisource AV Selector is unusual for two reasons. First, it provides several composite and S-video inputs. Second, it has a modulated UHF output which can stream a different source to the main AV output, ideal for a TV in a second room.

FEATURES

Product: Archsat Multisource AV Selector
Price: £49.35
Features: 3 sets composite video, S-video and stereo audio inputs; 2 Scart inputs; 1 set composite video, S-video and stereo audio outputs; modulated UHF output; UHF loopthrough; signal amplifier Supplier: Martin Turner Direct
Tel: 01291 431061
Website: www.bits4.tv

To make installation easier the Multisource Selector comes with a 1.5m UHF coaxial cable, a 1.5m S-video co-axial cable, and a 1.5m phono-to-Scart cable for connecting to your TV.

The remote control has two sets of buttons, plus a power button. The top set controls which device is output via the composite video, S-video and stereo outputs (known as the AV output), the bottom set controls which is output via the UHF modulator (labelled RF).

Five of the front panel indicators refer to the inputs (labelled satellite, DVD, CATV, VCR, Aux), the sixth indicates the UHF and AV output status. If a device is using the AV output, it's indicator is red; using the UHF output it's green, and using both outputs it's orange. If you're using the front panel buttons, you have to first select red or green on the AV/RF button, then select the device you want.

This sounds fairly simple, but the manual is written in a pidgin English that clearly hasn't been proof-read by someone unfamiliar with this equipment. Only the diagrams and UHF output setting tables make any sense.

The Multisource Selector has a built-in amplifier to compensate for transmission loss, and neither pictures nor sound are affected by their passage through it. However, it only deals with composite video or S-video, so even with the Scart sockets you will not be able to enjoy the higher quality of an RGB signal, which is common on most European AV equipment.

However, if you also want to feed a second TV via UHF, then the Multisource Selector may be of special interest ■

YOUR DIGITAL TV EQUIPMENT AND INSTALLATION QUESTIONS ANSWERED

The cable guy

I ordered Sky last week mainly because, as the BBC engineer phrased it, our farm is not in a television reception area. However, when the Sky engineer came to install it, they could not get a line of sight from the house and so cancelled the contract. To receive a signal it will be necessary to locate the dish 40-50m from the house and I have been told by an independent fitter this would require cable costing £2.50 a metre.

A 50m cable run will need a larger dish or in-line amplifier

I have seen cable much cheaper than this, but is it the same thing? I am now considering installing a system to view just the BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Five.
– JOHN NICHOLAS FORDHAM, CARDIGAN

It's surprising they can't get line of sight. Farm buildings are usually surrounded by fields! Whatever channels you are hoping to receive, you will run across the same problem, since they all come from the same spot in the sky.

The price you have been quoted for cable is about four times too much! You should be able to buy suitable double-shielded co-ax cable for a lot less.

However, 50m of cable will lose around 13dB of signal so you will probably need an in-line amplifier near the LNB (it's powered by the LNB power running through the cable from the receiver). You may be able to get away with not using an amplifier if you use a 60cm dish instead of the Sky minidish.

Try without the amplifier first and if you get 'rain dropout' add the amplifier later.

You could install the cable yourself (it should be protected along its run outside) and let the installer do the rest – he'll be delighted to save time. You could even install the dish yourself.

ALL THAT (28°E) HEAVEN ALLOWS

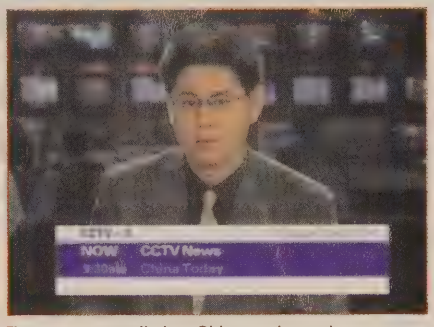
Is it possible to pick up channels without moving my Sky dish?
– RICHARD LAKE, BY E-MAIL

You can pick up around 400 channels without moving your Sky dish – the Sky Digital channels!

If you really mean channels that are not on the Sky EPG but do broadcast from 28°E (Sky Digital) then yes, there are a few. You can tune into them with a Digibox using the Add Channel facility (Services – 4 – 4) and you'll find the details to enter there in the Channel Check section of this magazine.

If you mean channels on other satellites, then no, you have to point the dish at the satellite to receive the channels. Keep the dish on 28°E (Sky Digital) and you'll only get channels from 28°E.

What's more, if you do move the dish to point at another satellite, you'll lose the Sky Digital channels that you currently get. Also, the Digibox is not the best receiver for finding and watching channels outside of the Sky Digital package and you'll find that most other satellites are weaker than those at 28°E when 'viewed' from the UK and so you may not pick up anything anyway (you'll need a larger dish).



There are currently two Chinese channels on Sky Digital

CHINESE CHECKERS

I have had recently installed a Sky Digibox in my home and have been told by them that you can inform me of Chinese-speaking Chinese stations that I can tune in from my dish. At present I have only two Chinese stations that come with my Sky package.

Can you advise me of other stations in Chinese I can receive and at what frequency they can be received?
– GRA, BY E-MAIL

With a normal Sky Digibox system, you can only receive channels from 28°E (Astra 2A, 2B and 2D at 28.2°E and Eurobird 1 at 28.5°E).

The only Chinese channels currently broadcasting from 28°E are the two you know about – PCNE (at 11.565GHz/V, 27500, 2/3) and CCTV9 (at 11.662GHz/H, 27500, 2/3).

I NEED A CZECH-UP

I live in the south-east of England and use a 70cm dish. I can see many channels on Eurobird – but can't see anything from Slovak Link (12.643GHz) or Czech Link (12.607GHz). Basically, I'm getting zero signal on these frequencies. Any idea?
– BILL EWING, BY E-MAIL

Both of these two networks are still broadcasting from Eurobird 1 at these frequencies, and a 70cm

An old ONdigital box will pick up Freeview terrestrial channels dish should be more than adequate for reception in your area. Most of the channels (all except Ocko on the Czech Link package) are scrambled in Cryptoworks so you're not going to see much anyway, but you should still be receiving the signal.

Are you trying to receive these with a Sky Digibox? If so, make sure that you set the FEC to 3/4 and not the 2/3 that all Sky Digital channels of 27500 symbol rate use (2/3 is also the default FEC on the Add Channels menu). Getting that wrong is enough to get you a 'No Signal Found' message.

EVEN BETTER WITH FREEVIEW

I subscribed to ONdigital a few years back and received all their channels without any problem. I now want to try out Freeview. I haven't moved or changed my aerial so will I be able to get all the Freeview channels or muxes?
– SHARON PETERS, LONDON NW10

If you could get ONdigital then you should have no problems receiving all of the Freeview multiplexes (muxes) and all the channels. Some of the Freeview multiplexes use a more robust transmission than the ONdigital ones and receivers are these days more sensitive too, so even if your ONdigital reception was marginal, you would probably be OK with Freeview. With good ONdigital reception of old, you should get cracking Freeview reception.

If you still have the ONdigital receiver (with a CAM and viewing card slot) you will also be able to subscribe to Top-Up TV.

IT'S A TV TURN-OFF

A strange feature of my television (a Matsui, about 11 years old) is that it is not possible to watch an analogue channel without first switching off the satellite Digibox.

For example, until recently in order to listen to BBC regional news, you were advised to press 'TV' and '1' on the remote control. This would have no effect on my set unless the 'off' switch was first used to switch off the Digibox. I queried this with the installers, who agreed that it was necessary to switch off the Digibox because the system was 'all Scarted up'.

Recently, it was necessary to have a minor repair carried out on my set and I was lent a more modern receiver which behaved in the correct manner.

In fact, the satellite channels were picked up on a spare channel button on the remote control.

When my original TV was returned I asked the engineer about the satellite problem on my set and he used the same explanation that the system was 'all Scarted up' and it was not possible to watch a channel in analogue format if the Digibox was switched on.

Is this a problem with all sets predating the digital era or is there another explanation?
– NORMAN EVANS, STONEHOUSE

This isn't a problem with all sets that date to pre-digital times (it's nothing to do with digital TV per se) but it is a problem with older TVs.

One of the pins in the Scart socket on your TV is used to tell the TV that a signal is present from the Scart socket (a 12V switching voltage is output from the signal source on pin 8 of the Scart connection). TVs respond to that switching voltage by changing over to the external input.

Some TVs also have a button to select the external input (particularly if there is more than one Scart) or to refuse it and switch back to terrestrial TV. But some TVs don't have such a button and so there is no way to switch back to terrestrial TV. This is the problem with your TV – you have to switch off the Digibox (which sends the 12V down the Scart lead only when it's on) to get your terrestrial TV back.

Some satellite receivers have a TV/Sat button, which switches on and off the 12V switching voltage to the Scart socket – but the Digibox doesn't have one of these.

You could simply cut the pin 8 connection but then you wouldn't be able to watch Sky Digital through the Scart connection.

You could abandon Scart connections and watch Sky Digital via the UHF aerial connection only – but that will lose you quality.

So if you don't want to simply switch off the Digibox when you want to watch terrestrial TV, the best solution (though not very elegant) is to invest in a Scart switching box that switches the pin 8 line along with all the others. Remote control versions are available so you wouldn't even have to leave your seat.

GOING FOR A BOOSTER

I have been told that my postcode is OK for Freeview and I have bought a Goodmans GDB4 adapter and plugged it into my aerial (it's shared with a neighbouring flat). I get most of the channels extremely well, but all the channels from one mux are blocky and unwatchable. Will fitting a signal booster help?
– DAVID MARTINS, BY E-MAIL

It's likely that your aerial needs upgrading for digital terrestrial reception.
If it's a shared aerial then the distribution system may need upgrading too and all this may be a problem, depending on the attitude of your landlord.

A signal amplifier fitted anywhere within your flat is unlikely to help.

If you are in a strong signal area, you may find that you get better reception from a good aerial fitted indoors.

POINT IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

I have just purchased a secondhand Panasonic Sky Digibox, and I have connected it up to an 80cm dish and I am using a new Skyware LNB. When I am in Setup the signal strength is excellent and the signal quality is also excellent, although it keeps dropping down to about 20 per cent. The lock indicator is not locked, Network ID is 0000 and the Transport Stream is also showing 0000.

I have changed over the Sky box with my old Pace system to the 80cm dish and that shows all of the above specs except the signal quality is zero. Please could you give me any idea where I am going wrong? Both the receivers work on the Sky dish.

– DAVID ADCOCK, BY E-MAIL

You haven't said what satellite the 80cm dish is trained on. Your Digibox is most probably receiving a digital signal but not the one it's looking for (that's why it's not locked and the Network ID and Transport Stream show zero). If you're trying to get Sky Digital on this dish, you need to realign it on 28°E. If you are using the Panasonic Digibox as a FTA DVB receiver, then you need to alter the default transponder settings and tune in some channels manually.

BUSH OUT OF CONTROL

I have had a Sky Digibox for a couple of years and recently I got a new Bush widescreen TV (well, actually it was secondhand, but it's new to me!). I used to be able to control the old (Panasonic) TV volume and so on with the Sky remote control but I can't do this with the Bush TV. I know I need to programme the remote control with a new code for the Bush TV, but I lost the Sky manual a long time ago so I cannot look up the right code. Where can I find this out?

– SEAN APPLETON, BEDFORD

Sky remotes can be programmed for any TV

Press the Interactive button on your Sky remote and select the Customer Services item from the menu. Here you will find all sorts of technical help for a Digibox, including a complete list of remote control codes for different TVs.

GET A SWITCHING BOX

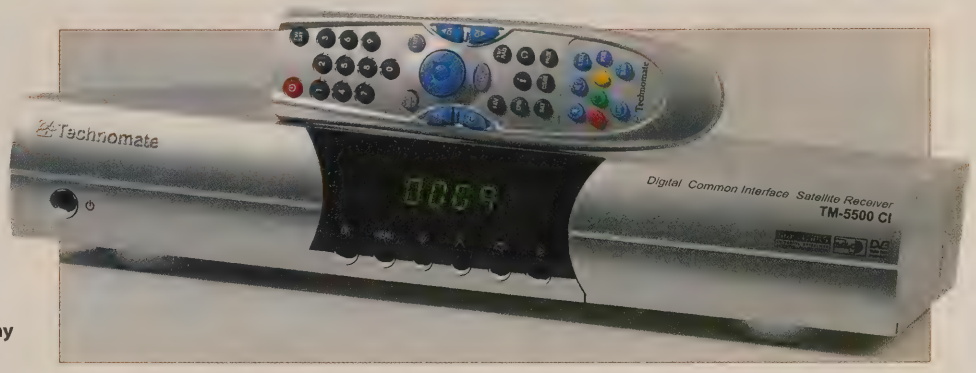
I want to be able to feed both a Panasonic TU-DSB30 Sky Digibox and a Technomate TM-5500CI through my video recorder, which has one input and one output Scart socket. Is it possible to do this? I'm in my 80th year, so sometimes can't see the wood for the trees.

– LES HOMER, CRADLEY HEATH

You could connect the TV Scart socket on the Technomate to the VCR Scart on the Digibox, with its TV Scart feeding into the input Scart of your VCR and the output Scart delivering the pictures to your TV.

Toggling the TV/Sat button on the Technomate would determine whether its signal or the Digibox signal is passed through to the VCR for recording or viewing.

However, this setup would not allow you to, say, watch a Sky Digital channel while recording one from the Technomate receiver. A better setup would use a Scart switching box to route each satellite signal to the TV or the VCR as required. This could be manually switched or with a remote control, depending on the Scart switching box chosen.



You can switch between auxiliary Scart inputs with the Technomate's remote control

CHANNEL BREAK-UP

I have had a Freeview system for about six months now and I don't get some of the channels that I'm supposed to, according to the Freeview website. I have connected the receiver to a huge aerial in my loft that was there when I moved in a year ago.

It gives good pictures with normal analogue TV. Some of the Freeview channels that I do get can break up when a big lorry goes by along the main road that my flat is on. What can I do about this?

– JASON PENNINGTON, BY E-MAIL

You'll need a wideband aerial for Freeview

Although your aerial is 'huge' and gives a good picture with analogue terrestrial TV, it is not necessarily suitable for digital terrestrial TV. You should fit a wideband aerial in your loft (and maybe a signal booster right next to the aerial) to make sure you get all the channels you should, and use high-quality, double-screened co-ax cable to the receiver to help eliminate the interference from passing vehicles.

TRADING UP

Can I improve my picture and sound quality by exchanging the standard LNB and dish supplied by Sky for another more expensive one? If so, which one? Would exchanging Panasonic TU-DSB20 for Panasonic TU-DSB45 improve picture and sound quality as well?

– IAN, BY E-MAIL

You don't say what you mean by 'improve'. If the picture and sound are breaking up then replacing the LNB may be the answer (if the existing LNB is faulty).

However, if you are simply concerned by the general quality of the digital broadcasts, coupled with typically fuzziness during movement (such as football pitch grass during a match) then a new LNB won't change anything – this is down to the format in which the programmes are transmitted.

Changing the receiver won't affect the picture or sound quality either (again, unless your existing receiver is actually faulty).

You may get some improvement of picture quality by changing your TV, especially if your current model is not really compatible with a Digibox (some are certainly not) ■

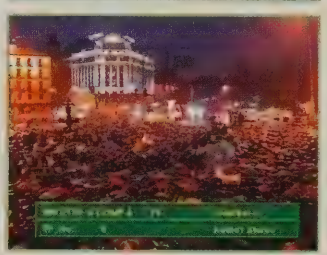
ROGER BUNNEY SEARCHES THE SKIES EVERY MONTH FOR SIGHTINGS AND NEWS SNIPPETS FOR MOTORISED DISH ENTHUSIASTS

On March 11 during morning rush-hour in Madrid, remote-controlled bombs exploded in railway carriages across the capital over a space of a few minutes and more than 191 commuters died.

Spain is well-served with satellite uplinking capacity and pictures of the wrecked trains and carnage soon appeared over many downlink frequencies. A main point for media coverage was at Madrid's Puerto de Atocha rail station, which hosted several sat-trucks that aired for much of the day with live reports and two-ways.

Both Eutelsats W1 10°E and W2 16°E carried the bombing for European networks; a new truck on the W2 block was 'NEWSLINK' running at 12.562GHz/H (SR 2816, FEC 3/4), elsewhere on W2 were raw feeds such as 'ENEX-B' using 12.563GHz, 'ATUA ATLAS ENEX-GLOBESTAR ESPAGNE' (12.560), 'RTL XNG D22' (12.518GHz), 'SKY NEWS' (12.533GHz), all horizontal at 5632, 3/4 and 'ESRETET 3' (an EBU feeder) 10.988GHz/H (6398, 3/4). W1 carried numerous feeds but Edmund Spicer (Littlehampton) suggests that the Hispasat satellite slot at 30°W was awash with news coverage, including feeds for EFE, Canaries, Globecast, Tele Madrid, Tele Cinco, TVG Galicia. That night was so busy that Roy Carman (Dorking) found downlinks every 4 or so MHz.

This was the first high-profile terrorist bombing in Europe with links to Al Qaeda and media coverage was intense. The following day massive demonstrations were seen across Madrid; again many OB and news reports appeared across the satellite arc. Even slumbering Sesat at 36°E was fired up to carry at least three circuits: 'EBU E-115 MADRID', 'ETTD-G COMP.A' and 'LANZADERA 1 Tvv' (11.063, 11.090, 11.108, all horizontal at 6111, 3/4) as logged by Alan Richards (Lincs).



Spanish regrets: Reporters gather at Madrid's Puerta de Atocha rail station after the rush-hour train bombings; millions later gathered despite rain to express their feelings. Footage carried on both Eutelsat W1 at 10°E and W2 at 16°E

March 13 saw the Spanish elections. José Maria Aznar's government was voted out on a public backlash and indications were that the incoming party would recall Spain's troops from Iraq. Anti-war protests continued in both Madrid and Lisbon on March 20, with large meetings all over the Peninsula. 'ENEX II LUX LX' was again on W2, 12.510GHz/H (5632, 3/4).

From March into April, UK security forces found large quantities of bomb-making materials in raids across London and Surrey. Roy on March 30 noted the familiar W2, 12.525GHz/H slot, 'SIS 12 8MB TD' outside New Scotland Yard with a report following arrests in Crawley. Later that day the Meridian Tonight BT leased sat-truck BT TES-43 uplinked the latest update into its 6pm programme from outside one of the raided houses – the UKI-587 signals via Telecom 2D, 8°W at 12.580GHz/H (above feeds 5632, 3/4). The next day BT TES-43 was outside the Reading Mosque, where the Islamic community was confirming that their faith is one of peace. It was interesting that TES-43 ran the downlink on 12.583GHz on 8°W this night, slightly above the previous night's 12.580GHz from Crawley.

Another bomb in Madrid (April 3) during a security forces raid on a suspected terrorist flat killed a police officer and several suspects. Live reports into the BBC newsroom were noted the following day over Eutelsat II F3, 21°E at 12.538GHz/H (4226, 7/8) – 'BBC-Madrid'. 'BBC News Baghdad, BBC UKI-216' was also transmitting on II F3 at the same time on the nearby 12.532GHz/H slot (4226, 7/8) with a Baghdad time evening report in 16:9. Both reports appeared during the inclined orbital access time of 2pm GMT onwards (see below and also John Locker's article 'Orbital nightmare' in May/June's Satellite & Digital Choice).

Following the attack on the Baghdad HQ of US forces in Iraq on March 8, APTN appeared on its usual W1 10.972GHz/V (4167, 5/6) feeder with update reports simultaneously with colleague broadcaster CBS Baghdad Mansour Hotel-Service 1 – which linked on W2, 12.533GHz/H (5632, 3/4). CBS News in Baghdad usually operates over W2 at frequencies from 12.525 to 12.560GHz/H, though the exact frequency varies daily.

OUR MAN IN BAGHDAD

This was borne out by the arrival of highly respected veteran newsman Dan Rather in Baghdad on March 9. Dan visited Iraq during the first conflict and interviewed Saddam before the second one. He returned to interview the American Ambassador for Iraq in one of Saddam's marble palaces, now being used as US army accommodation, which was played out back to CBS HQ in New York over W2, 12.556GHz/H (5632, 3/4). The playout was the unedited versions which included close-ups of Dan, close-ups of the ambassador and finally the wide shot; these would be edited at the NY studio into the final tape for transmission.

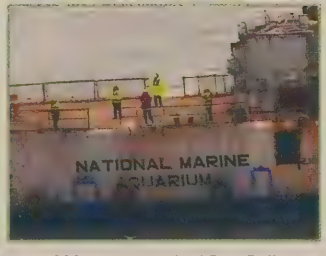
At the same time as the Spanish polls came Russia's presidential elections. No surprise here – Mr Putin was re-elected. A couple of feeds from Moscow were amazing! Mid-evening UK time there appeared on a usual APTN slot on W1 10°E a summing-up of the Russian elections (10.987GHz/V, 4167, 5/6, identing UKI-298 MOSCOW0. The presenter faced the camera, seemingly oblivious to the backdrop, a live shot of Kremlin Square. But behind the presenter the camera revealed the sky was aglow with either fireworks or a big fire. This was not to celebrate Mr Putin's return; a massive building on the far side of Kremlin Square was alight from end to end. On 16°E NTV RUS-6 fed live pictures from the Manege – the Equine Centre – which is (was!) a World Heritage site. It burned furiously and firefighters couldn't cope as the building was gigantic. Dramatic live pictures were carried on 12.563GHz/H (5632, 3/4) as the roof blazed and fell inwards. This got little coverage on UK TV as events in Spain overshadowed all else that day.

Eutelsat II F3, which nominally lives at 21°E but suffers an inclined orbit of 3.4° (info from Lyngsat), is an active source of TV activity for part of the day as the satellite itself meanders around its 21.5°E slot. Fortunately for most enthusiasts who do not have an inclined tracking dish but just a standard polar/H-to-H mount, the optimum period for II F3 access is from about 2pm to about 4.30pm – and 12 hours later for night owls!

I ran tests on March 20 to see a typical afternoon. In Ku-band most activity appeared between 11.650-11.700GHz/H (5632, 3/4) comprising SisLINK and other UK uplink facility houses and carried horse racing from Ascot and Waterford, and an anti-war protest in London. In Telecom band activity was found between 12.500-12.580GHz/H comprising four feeds mainly UK-sourced, other than a 'Baghdad 216'. None was SisLINK but included Solo and the BBC. It was interesting that coding varied from the Ku-band: two ran SR12593, 3/4 and the other two, including the BBC, ran SR4226, 7/8, the BBC identing 'BBC UKI 777P'. Another afternoon at 5.30pm APTN Jerusalem appeared on II F3 at 12.538GHz/H (4226, 5/6). And on April 1 a random II F3 check mid-afternoon found an empty Telecom band segment but down on Ku-band some four feeds, one ITN and another three UK race meetings – so II F3 is alive, well and worth a check any afternoon, particularly when the nags are running!



Al-Jazeera played another Bin Laden tape as CBS correspondent Dan Rather flew into Pakistan for an update on the hunt for him; American forces were caught up in some fierce fighting in Baghdad; and veteran warship HMS Scylla was retired to make a new home for fish and scuba divers

MYSTERY SIGNALS

There's a mystery signal lurking on PAS-3R/6 at 43°W, says Alan Richards. He suspects that a little Mexican channel is being masked by a larger TVSA downlink and suggests a check, perhaps +2MHz of the 12.602GHz (6250, 3/4) and 12.609GHz (1562, 7/8) – both vertical – slots may reveal something. He can't resolve it and my dish is fringing into foliage. Can readers look, please? A couple of new channels to check out on the Sirius 5°E slot: Latvia TV5 (11.840GHz/H, 27500, 3/4) in late March was running test programmes – marginal on an 80cm dish, and at 12.625GHz/V (3400, 3/4) Oltenia TV has appeared with some B-films, harpsichord/zither music, and football.

Edmund Spicer (Littlehampton) received numerous Hispasat 30°W news feeds of the Madrid bombings and more recently from Eutelsat W2, 16°E with SKY NEWS DSNG on the familiar 12.525GHz/H (5632, 3/4) using the service ident UKI 784 C1 4.2.0. The recent Scotland vs Ireland rugby match was carried in the clear over the La 7 Italian bouquet (12.631GHz/H, 6111, 3/4) which is encrypted on its 13° Hot Bird downlink. Edmund uses only an 80cm dish, which provides marginal threshold reception on the 16°E signals. Noting the II F3 English racing above, Edmund went one better with Dubai horse racing over on Atlantic Bird 3 at 5°W (also the Telecom 2C slot) at 12.543GHz/H (27500, 3/4) via GCPE1 and in the bouquet at 12.696GHz/V (14685, 3/4) he found free-to-air UK sport carried on TV Sport Romania. All the FTA channels in the bouquet displayed OK, but the TV Sport Romania just gave a blank screen, requiring manual input of new PIDS (VPID 1907, APID 1911, PCR 8190, from SatCoDX), or wheel out your blind search receiver. Full credit to Edmund, who in his spare time works on the St Richard's Hospital Radio (CHR on 1431KHz) at Chichester.

In Whitesand Bay, Plymouth, HMS Scylla went to the seabed on March 27. Actually, the good ship Scylla (of the cod wars and the Falklands Conflict) was deliberately sunk by three explosive charges to form a man-made reef. Her demise was carried to the world by UKI 784 C1 4.2.0 over Eutelsat W2, 16°E at 12.524GHz/H (5632, 3/4). The diving fraternity will use the wreck and cash received from this attraction will bring an estimated £1million to the local economy as well as conserving marine life. Webcams will be set up.

'Lonewolf' was the service ID of an unusual transmission seen by Roy and me over Europestar 1, 45°E on March 26. 11.656GHz/V (5632, 3/4). Not an OB from Transylvania, but an interview with Pakistan's President Pervez Musharraf about the situation on the border, the hunt for Al Qaeda, and attempts by Al Qaeda to encourage the security forces to rise against him.

Roy monitored a CBS report on March 18 over NSS-7 at 21°W detailing Pakistan's military operations along its border with Afghanistan. Heavy fighting was in progress as the army, assisted by outside special forces, engaged elements of Al Qaeda and the Taliban. The CBS special was linked back to NY over the BTNA WASH STREAM lease at 11.575GHz/H (5632, 3/4).

Finally, check Hellas-Sat-2 39°E slot now the Olympic Torch is on the move. The flame was seen twice in March at 12.633GHz/V (6111, 3/4). Olympics coverage will be plentiful on this bird ■

Horizon Digital Satellite Meter

HDSMV2

- Signal Strength and BER displayed together
- 32 Transponders or 16 satellites, horizontal & vertical
- Audible tune-in, with back light
- DVB, C&Ku band, Mpeg, V Sat compatible
- Input dynamic range -65dBm~-25dBm
- Input connector F-female. Input imp 75 ohms
- Symbol Frequency rate from 1 Msps~45Msps
- Universal charger 100 V ~ 240 V Ac/ 12 W. Intelligent Charger (CE approved) with delta V delta T detection Fast charge, then Trickle
- Run time with full charge (single LNB): Minimum 3 hours from 2.4Ah NiMH battery
- Figure of 8 mains input connector. 2.1 mm Female PSU plug for external charge via supplied car charger
- LNB short circuit protection 500 mA automatic limiter
- RF input range 950- 2150 MHz
- Computer interface: Serial Port (COM 1,2,3 or 4) for
- Upgradeable software on satellite settings
- RF level can be displayed in dBuV (accurate to +-1dB) or linear scale (256 steps). Feature available in set up mode
- C/N (carrier noise) is displayed in dB
- Quality (Pre B.E.R or bit error rate) is locking on faster making it easier to lock on to the satellite initially typical lock in less than 100 mS
- Instead of "found" to indicate lock of correct satellites actual B.E.R can be displayed. Feature available in set up mode
- The quality (Pre B.E.R) bar graph can be logarithmic rather than liner. Making it easier to peak the dish and helps with weak satellites. Feature available in set-up mode
- Diseqc switch commands available in submenu

HDTM-Si Professional
DVB-T-compliant

Specification:

- Serial interface: RS232 9600 baud N 8 1
- Commands: Pre BER, Post BER and RF level
- Input and out put connectors: BNC
- Frequency input : 167-862 Mhz
- Bandwidth: 6, 7 or 8 MHz
- Input level: -72 dBm to -20 dBm
- Built in: COFDM with Automatic constellation
- Power requirement: Ac 100-240 V @ 12 W or 12 V DC 12 W
- Size: 168x58x124 mm
- Weight: 1 Kg

Key Feature

- Small and compact meter for monitoring pur posed via RS232 computer interface.
- Easy to read RF level (calibrate 35dBuV to 75 dBuV with over ind) and Pre and Post BER (Bit Error Rate)
- Fast and responsive
- Either 12 V DC supply or 100-240 V mains
- For 24/7 use

SKY DIGITAL

EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT RECEIVING AND SUBSCRIBING

How to get Sky Digital

The easiest way to get Sky Digital is to call Sky on 08702 404040, pick your package and book an installation. You must have a Digibox to get Sky Digital. The Sky Digibox receiver and mini-dish are free, although non-subscribers must pay a £120 installation charge. Otherwise, installation costs £50 if you take the top Sky World package, or £70 if you take any other package.

If you'd prefer to see a demo before you buy, see an independent satellite dealer or high street electrical shop. The likes of Dixons just pass on your details to Sky's installers, but if you visit an independent, you'll also be able to assess the people who'll fit the system.

It's possible to buy the mini-dish and Digibox outright for about £299 to avoid any contractual obligations to Sky, but you'll have to do this through an independent dealer.

Sky prefers to be paid by direct debit or a standing credit card order. If you choose to pay by cheque, there's a monthly surcharge of £4.

Watching the BBC, ITV, Channel 4, and Five by satellite

All BBC channels, including regional variations, are free-to-air and can be picked up by anyone in the UK with any digital satellite receiver and a 60cm-plus dish in diameter pointed at Astra 2D. Obtaining a free Digibox and mini-dish from Sky and paying the £120 installation fee for non-subscribers can get you all of the BBC channels as well as many other FTA channels.

ITV1, Channel 4, and Five remain encrypted and currently only available to those with a subscription viewing card (including lapsed subscribers) or those with a free-to-air card (no longer obtainable).

ITV2 is only available to Sky subscribers.

The Sky Digital small print

The Sky Digital contract you sign contains rules you must adhere to. Remember the following:

Connection: You must keep your Digibox connected to your dish, mains power and a working phone line in the UK or Irish Republic for the first 12 months of your contract. If you don't, Sky could block your viewing card or demand you pay the value of their subsidies, currently £220.

Changing channels: You can alter your subscription package at any time, but you must take it for at least a month before changing again.

Cancellation: Sky requires a month's notice for cancellation, but since you can't cancel until the end of the first year, you'll actually pay for a minimum of 13 months.

Box Office films and pay-per-view events

These are ordered using the Box Office button on your Sky Digital remote. You'll need to give your PIN number (the last four digits of the customer number on your viewing card). All films are now Multiplay – you can watch them as many times as you like for a day after your purchase, though in Sky's case this day ends at 6am.

Sky Plus – the premium choice

Sky Plus is a next-generation Sky Digibox, with two tuners and a PC-style hard disc drive. It can record the satellite signal direct to the hard disc with no loss of quality, and holds 20 hours of material on average. The twin tuners allow you to record on one channel while watching another, or two channels at the same time and you can also pause live TV, and fast-forward or reverse at up to 30 times' normal speed.

Sky Plus costs £199 and requires a £10 monthly subscription to use its extra features (waived if you subscribe to two or more Premium channels), along with £50 to install a quad-output LNB on your dish.

Sky in more than one room

Every Sky Digibox has two UHF outputs, and a second TV in another room can be connected to one of these, along with a Remote Link (£10) which allows you to change channels from the second room. Alternatively, you can buy a wireless Videosender for £60-£100, which will send a high-quality picture and stereo audio up to 30m indoors and relay remote commands back to the Digibox. But if you want to watch two different channels in different rooms you'll have to buy a second Digibox for £99 (direct from Sky, or shop around for less), plus £50 to upgrade to a quad-output LNB. The second Digibox can be watched with a second subscription card costing £15/month.

Choosing your Digibox

The only way to choose which model of Digibox you use is to buy through an independent dealer, or secondhand. Dixons allows you to state a preference, and Sky In-Home Services won't offer a choice of receivers.

Extra and secret channels

There are no secret channels hidden by Sky as a treat for those in the know. However, subscribers can add extra ITV regions using the Add New Channels feature in the Services menu on 10.832GHz/H, 10.892GHz/H, and 10.906GHz/V (all SR 22000, FEC 5/6). New channels usually test for some time before joining the EPG, but if you find out the frequencies you can tune these in manually. There are also a dozen or so foreign channels on Eurobird that are too weak to be picked up with the mini-dish and which use odd symbol rates the Digibox cannot read.

Foreign channels

The old Sky analogue service shared the Astra 1 satellites at 19.2°E with dozens of German channels. Sky Digital broadcasts from Astra 2, 28.2°E, and Eurobird, 28.5°E, each developed to give the UK a very large digital satellite capacity. There are no mainland European channels available through the basic free-to-air Sky Digital system, but there are several Asian and Arabic services.

Sky Digital in Europe

Sky can't officially sell subscriptions to anyone living outside the UK or Irish Republic, and it is technically fraud to claim you're living in the UK or the Irish Republic to obtain a viewing card. Legalities aside, thousands abroad use their friends/relatives' addresses, and there's a profitable industry using real and bogus UK addresses to get viewing cards, which are sold round Europe at a premium. Reception is a problem outside the UK, particularly for BBC channels. You'll need a far larger dish to get reliable reception, but reportedly, people as far away as Egypt and Morocco pick up Sky Digital.

Astra 2D

The BBC, ITV, the Irish channels, some Sky's music channels, some Sky Box Office channels and Sky Sports Xtra all broadcast on Astra 2D, which has a very tight footprint in comparison to Astra 2A and 2B, or Eurobird. This means viewers in Europe will generally need a larger dish to pick up these channels than the other Sky channels. As a general rule, we recommend 60cm in France, The Netherlands and Belgium, up to 90cm in western Germany and southern Norway, up to 2.4m in east Germany, northern Italy and most of Spain, 3m in central Italy and central Europe, and 3.5m in most of the Mediterranean and eastern Europe.

SATELLITE FAQ

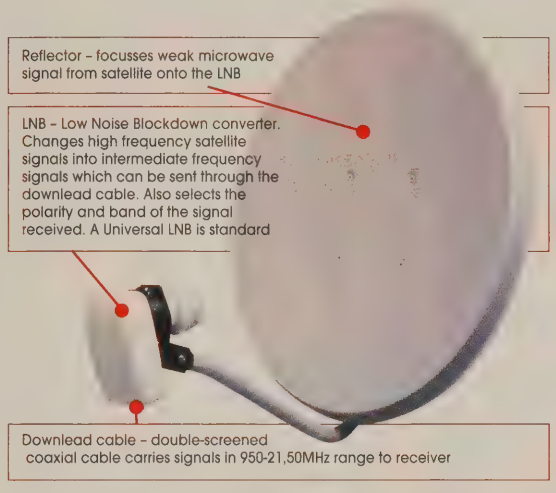
ANSWERS TO THE SATELLITE TV QUESTIONS YOU ASK THE MOST

What are the different types of receiver?

Free-to-air receivers can only pick up TV channels which are not scrambled. As there are thousands of these out there, you won't be short of anything to watch.

Common interface receivers can be upgraded to receive scrambled channels, if you find you want a particular foreign TV service.

Conditional access receivers have extra hardware which allows you to insert a viewing card for scrambled subscription TV channels.



Can I use my PC or Mac to pick up satellite TV?

Yes. There are several makes of digital TV receiver card or USB device for PC users, which can tune in satellite TV and display it on your monitor, make recordings to your hard disc, and receive high speed internet-by-satellite.

Mac users are currently limited to Elgato's EyeTV300, a Firewire-based external tuner.

PC and Mac users have the advantage that their software can be easily upgraded to the latest broadcast video formats such as MPEG 4:2:2 and high-definition TV. You can even do it yourself.

How can I get more than one satellite?

You can have more than one dish, or have up to four 'offset feed' LNBs on the same dish, but at most these can only be for satellites within 10-15° of each other.

A motorised dish will provide a greater selection of satellites from across the whole sky. Users of small dishes up to 90cm can use a simple DiSEqC 1.2 motorised mount. Dishes of 1m and above will need a more powerful and complex 36V motor drive.

We have recently seen some radical new dish designs such as the Cybertenna and Force Frontier, using unusual materials and shapes, which enable a fixed dish to pick up 10 or 15 satellites within a 40° arc. Even greater improvements are expected.

What size of dish am I allowed on my house, and how many can I have?

Current planning regulations state that every home is allowed a single dish up to 90cm diameter. In conservation areas this may be reduced to 60cm diameter or dishes may be banned altogether (although this may infringe your human rights under EU law). Larger dishes are only allowed if you apply for planning permission.

These regulations are currently under review by the Government, and we expect an announcement before the end of 2004.

In practical terms, if you have a large dish and don't ask for planning permission, you'll only land in hot water if your neighbours report you to the local authority. Take care when siting the dish, using chimney breasts and eaves to disguise it – if possible ask for your neighbours' blessing – and you shouldn't have any trouble.

There are several 'dishes' around designed to be discrete – the Globedish, the Cubsat and flat panel dishes are all more bearable – and you can paint your dish with non-metallic car paint to match the brickwork.

What are DiSEqC and USALS?

Digital Satellite Equipment Control is a standard created by Eutelsat for receivers to select between LNBs and control motorised dishes. A DiSEqC-compatible receiver sends pulses at 22kHz, along the LNB cable to control a DiSEqC switch or motor.

Mini-DiSEqC switches can select between two LNBs, DiSEqC 1.0 is used for up to four LNBs, DiSEqC 1.1 for up to 16 LNBs, using two sets of pulses.

DiSEqC 1.2 uses the pulses to instruct a 'smart' motor to move east or west, or to go to a preset position. USALS (also known incorrectly as DiSEqC 1.3 or Goto X) uses an even smarter mount which can find any position in the sky based on a single reference bearing and the user's longitude and latitude.

How can I get encrypted channels?

You'll need a viewing card and the hardware to use the viewing card, either built into your receiver or with a conditional access module.

What are pirate viewing cards?

Pirate viewing cards are blank cards programmed with the keys for one or more subscription TV channels or packages (usually obtained on the internet). It is not currently illegal to own or produce viewing cards for personal use, but all activities relating to commercial production are illegal.

What is a conditional access module?

A conditional access module (or CAM) contains the technology needed to unlock encrypted subscription TV channels, using a viewing card. A CAM may be built into a receiver, or a separate unit the size of a credit card. CAMs are available for most types of encryption, except the Videoguard system used by Sky Digital.

What is a common interface?

What is a Magic CAM?

Magic CAMs, Joker CAMs and Global CAMs contain the software for several types of encryption, for use with viewing cards containing keys to disparate packages. Most encryption companies maintain that Magic CAMs should not be legal.

What are 'feeds'?

Broadcasters often use satellite links – known as 'feeds' – to transfer programming from remote locations prior to broadcast.
Feeds are often unedited, containing bloopers and footage unsuitable for broadcast. Many are unencrypted, although sports feeds are becoming rare, and broadcasters are moving to the technical superior MPEG4:2:2 format.

What about analogue?

Germany still broadcasts around 60 analogue TV channels on Astra 1 to satisfy the millions of analogue TV users over there, and France continues its analogue Secam broadcasts of the national TV channels at 5W. Analogue signals are becoming a rarity on other satellites, since digital broadcasting is vastly cheaper than analogue, and the receivers are cheap enough for anyone to upgrade.

Keene Electronics presents..

Scart cables like no other...

Keene Electronics new SyncBlaster cables give you the power to easily connect RGB scart equipment directly to Plasma and LCD screens, and projectors.

Most of these screens struggle to work with the paltry 0.3V sync provided from an ordinary RGB scart socket. Enter SyncBlaster. These fiendishly clever cables incorporate a fully functional sync separator and amplifier, providing the TTL level sync required for correct screen operation.

To avoid the need for yet another 'black box' we've managed to cram all the essential electronics inside the actual scart plug body.

Not only that, the cables can draw the required operating power directly from the scart socket (pin 8) so for most applications there's no additional power supply to worry about either!

Keene SyncBlaster – so useful it's almost scary.

STERLING CABLES

SyncBlaster cables are not suitable for use with monitors designed solely for computer use (the screen must support a horizontal scan rate of 15.625KHz – most projectors, plasma and LCD panels do whereas most CRT monitors don't).

It's OK, Yarr

EVERY MONTH, MATTHEW HOLBROOK KEEPS AN EAR TO THE SKIES FOR NEWS OF SATELLITE RADIO

Listeners with free-to-air receivers have had reasonable stability in recent months, but Sky has resorted to changing A-PID numbers again and, as ever, there doesn't seem to be any logic to the changes.

The main transponder to be affected is 12.344GHz/H. RTE Europe's A-PID drops by one, the A-PIDs of Akash Radio, Sukh Sagar [illegible] WTN Radio [illegible] UK, Club Asia, WRN English Europe, Solar Radio, Family Radio, Family Radio International 1 and 2, Asian Gold Radio and Easy Radio London have all dropped by two. And Gaydar Radio's A-PID has dropped by three.

In addition to these changes the Sky Channel Line-up has changed from 2313 to 0660 and on 12.441GHz/V BBC Radio 2 has changed from 2367 to 3329 and BBC Radio 4 FM from 2368 to 3330.

Liberty Radio on channel 936 has relocated from 12.402GHz/V, SR [illegible]0, FEC 2/3, A-PID 2311 to [illegible]GHz/H, A-PID 2305. Asian music station Yarr Radio (www.yaar[illegible].com) has started on channel 937, using 12.324GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 2/3, A-PID 0644. And as expected, FCUK FM has started live service on 12.344GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 2/3, A-PID 2312, taking over from The Selector.

Finally for Sky Digital, 12.344GHz/H was being mi[illegible] [illegible]GHz/V at the time of writing.

Over on Astra 1 at 19.2°E DW-Radio channels 1, 3 and 4 have stopped broadcasting in analogue on transponder 11.229GHz/V. The three channels are available in digital from the same space using the parameters 11.597GHz/V, SR 22000, FEC 5/6, A-PIDs 2010, 0037 and 2040 [illegible]pectively. The same channels as [illegible] W-Radio 2, 5, 6, 8, 9 and M [illegible] available from 13°E on Hot Bird 6's 11.604GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 5/6. Classic FM Netherlands is no longer on Astra 1's 12.574GHz/H and E1 Radio has left 12.226GHz/H.

Radio Italia (www.radioitalia.it) has moved from its slot on Express 3A at 11°W to take up residence on Eutelsat W2's 11.020GHz/H, SR 3436, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0641 at 16°E. It was already available on Hot Bird 4's 12.673GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0252. Staying at 13°E, Hellas Live (www.hellaslive.com) has started on 11.604GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 5/6, A-[illegible] French channel Ciel AM (www.cielradio.com) has relocated from 12.245GHz/H to 11.623GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0269. Erotikos 9.48 (www.erotikos.gr) has begun on 12.188GHz/V, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0683. And Peiraiki Ekklisia 91.2 FM (www.imp.gr/ekklisia_fm.htm) is new on the same transponder, A-PID 0744.

The packed WorldNet/Voice of America transponder 12.226GHz/V has changed from a SR of 12800 to one of 27500, and several additional channels have been added, including VoA News Now on A-PID 4730, VoA Music Mix on A-PID 4722 and Radio Sawa Iraq on A-PID 4732.

Finally this month, the German Hit Mix FM (www.hitmixfm.de) has returned to Hot Bird 3's 12.245GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0298 ■

guide to radio channels

Satellite receivers spend most of their time tuned to TV but there is also an abundance of radio stations transmitted from the same satellites and receivable using the same equipment. There are three broadcasting formats for satellite radio – digital, analogue and Astra Digital Radio (ADR). Digital and analogue radio are receivable on digital and analogue (respectively) TV receivers, and ADR requires a special receiver and these are not widely available in the UK. ADR is only available on the Astra 1 satellites (please note that due to pressure on space ADR listings may not be included) ■

A to Z of satellite

AC-3
Flexible audio data compression format designed by Dolby Laboratories to enable transmission of high-quality multi-channel audio such as Dolby Digital 5.1 alongside digital TV signals. A digital TV receiver with the correct hardware recognises the AC-3 signal and passes it to a digital audio output, for decoding by suitable home cinema audio equipment

Actuator
motor and feedback system to drive a motorised multi-satellite antenna

Antenna
any device to pick up and deliver satellite microwave signals to the receiver

Apex
the highest point (eg. of a motorised dish's arc)

Arc
the imaginary curve connecting the Clarke Belt satellites in the sky

Aspect ratio ratio of the width of a TV picture to its height. Conventionally 4:3 (pronounced 4-by-3). See also Widescreen

Astra Digital Radio system for digital audio broadcasts by satellite using compressed digital audio occupying the audio subcarrier space

AV (audio-visual) equipment for all aspects of TV and audio

Azimuth
compass bearing of a satellite or a dish's reception path

Bandwidth
range of frequencies occupied by a signal or allowed by equipment

raw satellite TV signal from a receiver before modulation to a signal suitable for a television

Beam satellite transmission pattern; may be wide, narrow or spot beam

Beamwidth
the acceptance angle of a dish

Belling-Lee
plug/socket type used for UHF (aerial) connections and for LNB connections on a few European receivers

BER (bit error rate)
accuracy of a digital signal. Equivalent to analogue S/N

Bird satellite

Bit rate
speed of digital transmission, usually expressed in Mb/s. About 5Mb/s is considered equivalent to a broadcast PAL picture, while about 2.5Mb/s is equivalent to VHS direction along the principal reception path of an antenna; where it is 'looking'

CAM (conditional access module) electronics used to unscramble a protected digital broadcast

Cassegrain
design of dish using a convex hyperbolic secondary reflector in addition to the main parabolic reflector

signal frequency range (3.700-4.200GHz) used for satellite TV, particularly in the US

Centre-feed dish dish with the focal point and feedhorn at the centre. See Offset

CI (Common interface) connection standard for adding equipment to a digital receiver. Uses the same connector and card format as the PCMCIA computer standard

Clarke Belt
see Geostationary orbit

C/N (carrier-to-noise ratio)
a measure of the performance of an antenna. Ratio of the received power to the noise power, expressed in dB

co-axial cable and connectors used for aerial and antenna cables

Co-located
Satellites in the same apparent orbital position (within 0.2° of one another)

Composite Video
TV signal containing chrominance, luminance and sync information. Used in Scart connectors

Compressed digital TV
digitised TV signal reduced in size by removing repeated information to allow several TV channels to occupy a single transponder

Conditional access technology which prevents unauthorised viewing of TV or other content, usually by scrambling (encrypting) it and issuing a viewing card

portion (11.700-12.500GHz) of the Ku-band frequencies intended for direct broadcast by satellite channels

Declination
small offset angle used on a polar mount to tilt the dish towards the horizon and so track the satellite arc

Decoder
unit to unscramble a protected TV signal for viewing

De-emphasis filtering introduced by a receiver, in conjunction with the opposite 'pre-emphasis' at transmission to reduce audio noise

Depolariser
device to convert circular polarised signals to linear polarisation for selection by a conventional polariser

Digibox
digital satellite receiver for the Sky Digital service incorporating a Videoguard CAM

Digital TV
see Compressed digital TV

Digital TV converter (aka DTT converter) low-cost digital terrestrial TV receiver which enables an individual analogue TV or VCR to pick up DTT channels via a Scart or analogue UHF input

DiSEqC (Digital Satellite Equipment Control) control system for antenna peripherals such as LNBs and switches using digital codes formed from 22kHz pulses on the LNB power supply

Dish
antenna using a parabolic reflector to collect microwave signals

Downlink
the signal's path from the satellite to the receiving antenna

DTH (direct-to-home) satellite TV intended for domestic reception

DTT (digital terrestrial television) channels broadcast by ground-based transmitter masts and received by a standard rooftop or indoor aerial through a DTT converter or IDTV, using a version of DVB standard optimised for terrestrial TV

Dual-feed
see Multi-feed

DVB (digital video broadcasting) standard for digital broadcasting established in Europe but used worldwide with the exception of the US

EIRP (effective isotropic radiated power) measure of a satellite's signal strength received on the ground

El-az (elevation-azimuth) mount
Simple fixed dish mount allowing adjustments in horizontal and vertical planes

Elevation
vertical angle between an antenna's reception path and the horizontal

Enhanced
LNB (9.750GHz local oscillator) or receiver (extended IF) designed for the reception of Astra 1D signals

EPG (electronic programme guide)
onscreen guide to the programmes showing at the time, and to come, on a number of channels

Eurocrypt
Smart card scrambling system used with many Mac transmissions

Event timer
programmable timer built into a receiver to switch on and change channels for unattended video recording

F-connector
a screw-on plug/socket commonly used for LNB-receiver connections

FEC (forward error correction) tuning parameter for digital broadcasts. Expressed as a fraction of the data used for correcting data errors introduced in the reception collects the microwave signals at the focus of a dish and channels them to the LNB

Feedhorn

Flat-plate antenna
Flat (often square) antenna used instead of a dish. Works by adding together the signal from an array of collectors position in front of a dish reflector where the reflected signals are gathered

Focal point

Footprint area of the Earth in which a satellite's signal can be received. Also refers to contour map of the received signal strength from a satellite

Free-to-air
channel broadcast without any conditional access or scrambling, allowing reception with any suitable receiver

FSS (fixed satellite services) band portion (10.700-11.700GHz) of the Ku-band frequencies intended for business use, but now the main analogue satellite TV band

Geostationary orbit orbit used by TV satellites at a height of 22,250 miles, in which satellites make an orbit in 24 hours, remaining fixed relative to the Earth's surface

Geosynchronous orbit
see Geostationary orbit

GHz (gigahertz)
a billion cycles per second or 1,000MHz

Gregorian
design of dish using a concave hyperbolic secondary reflector in addition to the main parabolic reflector

Half-transponder mode method of transmitting two TV channels on one transponder by sharing the bandwidth between them (usually two 36MHz channels on a 72MHz transponder). Reduces the EIRP of each channel by about 4dB

Horizon-to-horizon compact polar mount allowing extremely wide range of movement and accurate tracking

Horn
antenna using an enlarged feedhorn and no reflector

HDTV (high-definition television)
TV system using an increased number of screen lines for a sharper picture

HEMT (high electron mobility transistor) type of low noise LNB

IDTV (integrated digital TV)
TV set with a built-in DTT or digital satellite TV receiver, removing the need for an external converter or receiver

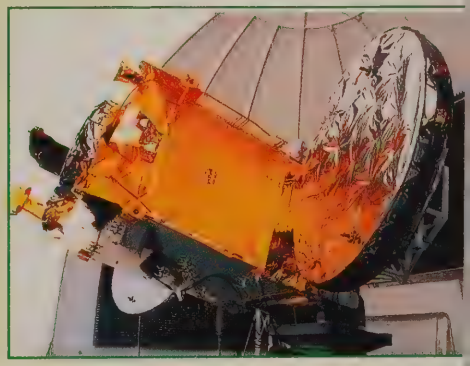
IF (intermediate frequency) signal in cable between LNB and receiver. Also receiver's tuning frequency. 950-2050MHz

IF shifter
device inserted in the LNB cable to enable reception of frequency bands not intended for the LNB

Inclined orbit
orbit inclined relative to the Equator. Produces apparent motion of the satellite above and below the arc

Inclinometer
device to measure a vertical angle



Interference
picture (or sound) distortion caused by an additional unwanted signal Jack see Actuator kHz (kilohertz)
one thousand cycles per second Ka-band signal frequency range (approximately 21-25GHz) now used for two-way broadband satellite services with small user terminals and dishes of less than a metre diameter Ku-band signal frequency range (10.700-18.000GHz) used for most satellite TV in Europe Latitude
the distance north or south of the Equator, expressed in degrees
Local oscillator
Device inside the LNB which determines which received frequency band is converted to within the receiver's tuning frequency: 10.000GHz for standard FSS, 9.750GHz for 'enhanced' FSS, 10.750GHz for DBS, 11.475GHz for Telecom, 10.600GHz for Astra high band and 5.150GHz for C-band
Longitude
the distance east or west of the Prime/Greenwich meridian, expressed in degrees Loopthrough
pair of output and input connections on a receiver that allows external equipment to be inserted in the TV signal path

LNB (low-noise block down-converter) amplifies received signals and converts them from microwaves to lower-frequency electrical signal to send down cable to the receiver Luminance part of a TV signal carrying the brightness information of the picture (see also Chrominance) Magnetic polariser solid-state polariser controlled by current from the receiver Marconi-type LNB
see Voltage-switched LNB Mechanical polariser
servo-actuated polariser controlled by electrical pulses from the receiver MHz (megahertz)
one million cycles per second. 1,000kHz Microwave
radio signal with a frequency of 1-30GHz Modulator device which impresses the TV picture and sound signal onto a radio carrier for broadcast or loopthrough Mount device to hold a satellite antenna and allow aiming adjustments MPEG (moving pictures expert group) international body to agree standards for compressed digital TV. MPEG-1: compression standard on VHS quality used in CD-video. MPEG-2: transmission-quality standard used for digital TV broadcasts MHEG-5 (Multimedia and Hypermedia information coding Expert Group) international open standard of software for operating interactive TV applications, used for British DTT Multi-feed antenna system with two or more LNBs on a fixed dish to view more than one satellite Noise unwanted constituent of a signal Noise figure measure of the performance (noise contribution) of an LNB, in dB – the lower, the better
NTSC (national television standards committee)
TV broadcast standard used in North America and Japan NVOD (near video-on-demand) multi-channel system broadcasting many editions of a film with staggered start times so a complete film is always available to a viewer after a short wait Offset
type of dish antenna with the focus and feedhorn below the centre of the dish OMT (orthogonal mode transducer) waveguide splitter to allow two LNBs to receive horizontal and vertical polarised signals simultaneously OpenTV
proprietary software for operating interactive TV applications used by Sky Digital in the UK and the FUN alliance of channels in Germany Orbit path of satellite round the Earth
PAL (phase alternate line)
TV system used by terrestrial TV in the UK and on most European satellite channels Parental lock receiver's PIN-operated lock that allows you to block out a specified channel Phono
plug/socket type used for receiver connections for audio, video and baseband signals PIN (Personal Identification Number) user-set security code number which must be entered to watch certain channels, order goods, access menus, etc Polariser device fitted on the dish to separate one polarity signal from the other Polarity
property of satellite signals to differentiate between signals of similar frequencies and squeeze more channels into the available space. Signals are either linearly polarised (horizontal and vertical) or circularly polarised (left and right-handed) Polar mount multi-satellite antenna mount aligned so single movement allows the antenna to track the arc of the Clarke Belt Positioner
unit to control the motor of a motorised dish to point the dish at pre-programmed positions. Can be included inside a multi-satellite integrated receiver/positioner PPV (pay-per-view) pay-TV system allowing the purchase of an individual one-time TV event Primary focus focal point corresponding to the signals in the dish's boresight Pro-Logic surround sound decoder system invented by Dolby Laboratories to reproduce cinema sound in the home PVR (personal video recorder) device using a hard disc drive to record TV in digital format, combined with an EPG to make programmed recordings easier
Quad-band LNB
LNB capable of receiving FSS, DBS and Telecom bands (including the 10.700-10.950GHz band first used by Astra 1D) in two ranges, selected from the receiver by altering the supply voltage (13/18V). See Triple-band LNB Receiver
indoor unit to take signals from the antenna, tune and convert them for display on a TV Reflector dish-shaped surface of an antenna which collects the signal Secam (sequence à memoire)
a television system used by some French channels. It displays as black and white on UK PAL television Skew fine-tuning of polarity to account for different angles of signals from different satellites
Scart
European 21-pin plug and socket standard to link audio-visual equipment Secondary focus focal point of a signal off the boresight of a dish. Used by multi-feed antennas Slot satellite position in the Clarke Belt, expressed as degrees east or west of South (the orbital position above 0° longitude)
Smart card credit card-sized electronic key put in a decoder to unscramble a protected channel SMATV (satellite master antenna television) satellite TV distribution system for blocks of flats with single antenna
S/N (signal-to-noise) ratio ratio of a signal's power to the noise power in a specific bandwidth, expressed in dB SNG (satellite news-gathering) use of satellite TV technology to send news material from portable uplink stations Sound-in-sync broadcast format in which audio data is placed in the picture's sync pulses, producing an unstable silent picture without a decoder Sparklies
impulse noise seen as black and white speckles in the picture caused by too low a S/N ratio (too weak a signal)
S/PDIF (Sony/Philips digital interface)
Standard for digital audio transmission using both fibre optic and coaxial connections, between a digital TV receiver and a home cinema audio system
Statistical multiplexing technique to increase the number of digital compressed channels broadcast in a given bandwidth by dynamically varying the compression ratio for each channel according to programme content

Subcarrier
auxiliary signal associated with an analogue satellite TV signal used for carrying the audio soundtrack or additional radio stations
S-video video format which maintains separate chrominance and luminance signals Symbol rate tuning parameter for digital broadcasts. Measure of the rate of supply of data in the signal Sync
TV signal constituent which synchronises the picture scanning of the TV set with the transmission

Telecom band portion (12.500-12.750GHz) of the Ku-band frequencies first used by the French Telecom satellites but more correctly called broadcast satellite services (BSS) band Threshold
minimum C/N required to produce a sparklie-free picture. A measure of the sensitivity of a receiver – the lower the figure, the better Transponder (transmitter/responder) equipment inside a satellite responsible for receiving a single uplinked channel and re-broadcasting it back to Earth
Triple-band LNB
LNB which is capable of receiving FSS, DBS and Telecom bands in two ranges, selected from the receiver by altering the supply voltage (13/18V)
UHF (ultra high frequency)
300-3,000MHz. UK terrestrial TV uses 470-890MHz
Universal LNB voltage-switched type LNB with two reception frequency bands of 10.700-11.700GHz and 11.700-12.750GHz using local oscillator frequencies of 9.75GHz and 10.60GHz, selected by a 22kHz tone on the LNB power supply Uplink
the signal's path from Earth to the satellite USALS (universal satellite location system) enhancement of DiSEqC 1.2 motor control software enabling a motor to calculate the site of any satellite based on the user's latitude and longitude USB (universal serial bus) high-speed data interface for connecting peripherals, such as cameras, PCs, hard disc drives and printers to satellite receivers, DTT converters and PVR Videocrypt
smart card-operated encryption system used by Sky analogue subscription channels Videoguard
smart card-operated encryption system used by Sky digital subscription services VOD (video-on-demand) multi-channel system allowing a film to be broadcast immediately it is requested by an individual viewer Voltage-switched LNB combined LNB/polariser used on Astra systems with polarity selected by changing the voltage (13/18V) supplied to the LNB Waveguide accurately engineered channel for a microwave signal Widescreen
TV picture with an aspect ratio greater than the standard 4:3. Usually 16:9, but 14:9, 23:3 and others also seen Wideband
very extended receiver's IF tuning, allowing reception of Astra 1D with a 'standard' LNB (with 10.000GHz local oscillator). 700-2,050MHz at least 22kHz tones control system for LNBs. Conceived to select reception bands on universal LNBs, also used for LNB switches and as basis for the DiSEqC control system

Complete Guide to Euro Digital Channels

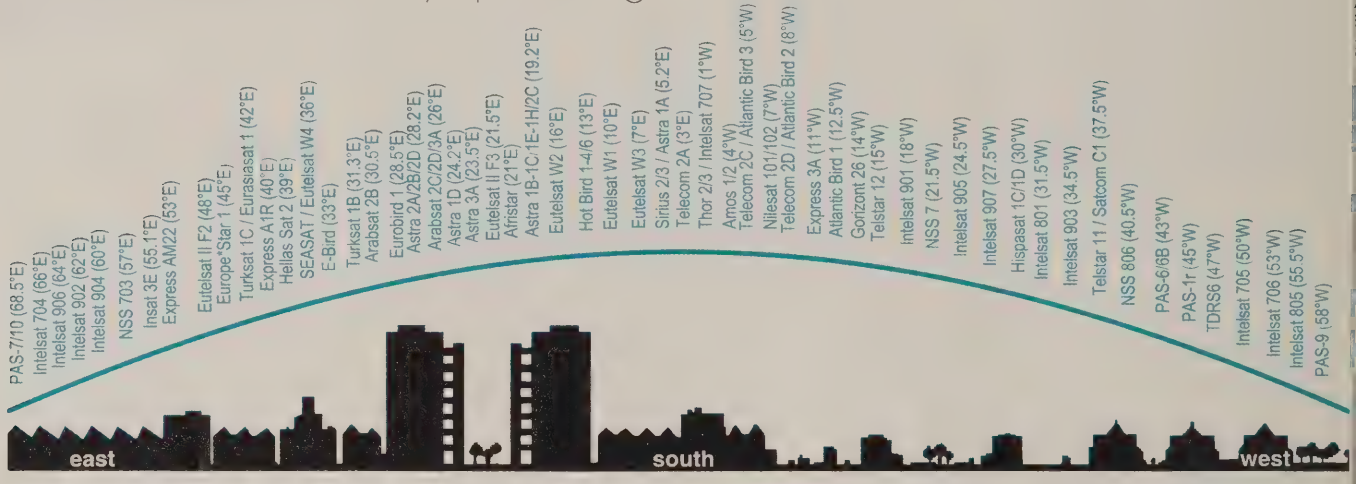
There are hundreds of satellite channels up there. Tune in with our monthly updated guide



Although the Astra craft at 19.2°E and 28.2°E are the highest profile satellites in the skies above the UK, there are many more providing TV channels. More than 40 provide thousands of digital stations, plus newsfeeds across Europe. This guide gives you all the details needed in order to tune in to them using fixed dish, dual-feed or multi-satellite systems.

For each satellite we have displayed the regular TV channels transmitted, plus the more dependable sources of news feeds. For each transponder (broadcasting frequency) we list the bouquet name, frequency and polarity, transponder number, encryption type, symbol rate and forward error correction (FEC) rate. These tuning details can either be manually entered into your receiver or are automatically found using some systems.

We also list two approximate minimum dish sizes for the South (London) and North (Edinburgh) to give you an idea of the strength of the signal. Remember that your own particular location, LNB type and even weather may also affect your ability to receive the channel. For each channel we show its name, a description, and main language.

■ All listings believed correct at the time of going to press. If you have a correction, e-mail it to us marked Channel Check or post it to us at the usual address.

BLASTS FROM THE PAST

Over the years What Satellite & Digital TV has tested more satellite receivers, decoders, dishes and home cinema gear than you can shake a stick at.

If you've missed that vital test, or want to upgrade your system, our Test Reprint service can provide you with a photocopy of any article from What Satellite & Digital TV since its inception.

The date of testing for current equipment can be found in the Buyers' Guide.

To order, fill in the coupon, adding details of your requirements, enclose a cheque or postal order for £3 per reprint (made payable to Highbury Entertainment London) and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and send it to What Satellite & Digital TV Reprints, Highbury Entertainment London, Unit 601, Highgate Studio, 53-79 Highgate Road, London NW5 1TW. Please allow 28 days for delivery.

For orders outside the UK, the price is £4.00 (sterling cheque), which includes the return postage.

Exclusive to What Satellite & Digital TV readers! Three publications for satellite TV enthusiasts at a very special price

Digital Satellite TV

Evolved from the famous Ku-band Satellite TV series of books, this 486-page tome is crammed full of background information, and technical details on all aspects of satellite TV – both digital and analogue – with pretty much everything you need in the way of theory, installation and troubleshooting of satellite systems. An indispensable guide to satellite TV technology.

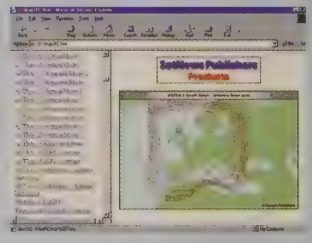
UK £36 • Rest of Europe £42 • Worldwide £47

Classic Black Book

The 'bible' of the black art of signal security, European Scrambling Systems is principally concerned with analogue scrambling systems, but is still of interest today to anyone interested in how scrambling and encryption systems are set up and knocked down by illicit 'hackers'. This 576-page book is packed with technical data, circuit diagrams, software listings, tables and photos with details on hacks of scrambling systems for PAL, Mac and the DirecTV DSS American digital network.

UK £34 • Rest of Europe £35 • Worldwide £39

SatMaps Footprints CD-Rom



On CD-Rom for both PC and Mac, SatMaps is a simple collection of satellite footprints – essential to work out which signals you can receive with your dish. Place the disc in your computer, double-click on an icon and away you go. Each footprint can be viewed, printed or downloaded for use in other software. From Afristar to Turksat, over 600 footprints of broadcast satellites around the world are here. SatMaps requires either Microsoft Internet Explorer or Netscape Communicator installed as the default internet application in your computer.

UK, Europe and Rest of World £29

How to buy a Satellite TV System

Choosing a satellite TV system is a confusing business. Here are a few guidelines to help out the first-time buyer Buying a satellite TV system will involve you in a whole lot of choices, but you've made the right choice so far – to go for the wealth of entertainment available on satellite TV.

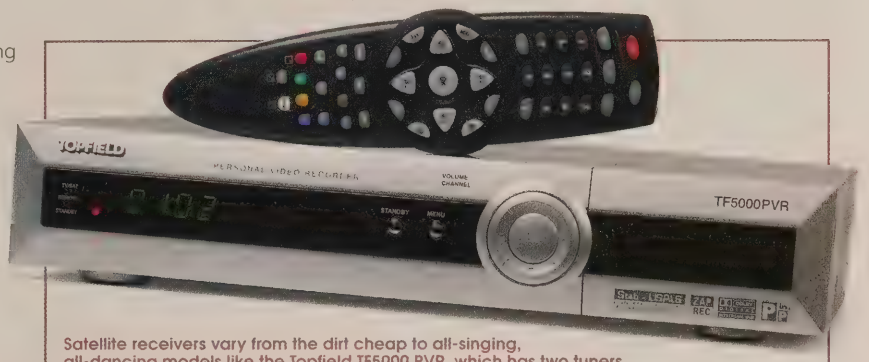
WHAT SYSTEM?

The first choice you must make is which type of satellite system to go for. It all depends on what you want to receive. Take a look in the Channel Check section of this magazine for an idea of which channels are broadcast from which satellites.

The cheapest and simplest satellite system uses a fixed dish to receive just the free channels from the Astra 1 satellites. This is what most people plump for – the 60cm dish (although an 80cm dish is needed in the north of England, the South-West, Scotland and Ireland). A Sky Digital system will not only receive the free and scrambled stations from Astra 2 and Eurobird at 28.2°E, it can also be used for free-to-air channels from some other satellites, with a suitable dish.

If you want to receive all the channels that are available, you'll need a motorised multi-satellite system and thinking about something which can receive encrypted channels. These are more versatile, but also much more complicated and expensive than simple free-to-air systems.



Satellite receivers vary from the dirt cheap to all-singing, all-dancing models like the Topfield TF5000 PVR, which has two tuners, DiSEqC motor control and hard disc recording

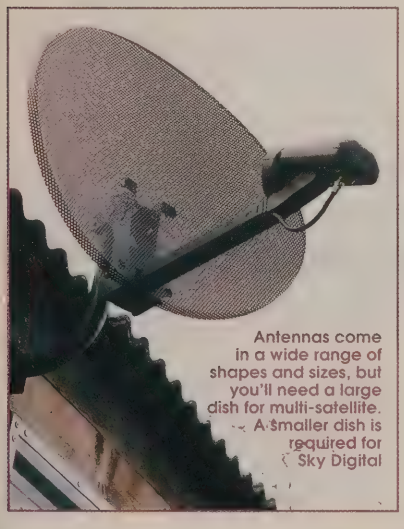
WHAT MODEL?

In the following tables we list all the receivers currently available, separated into categories of fixed dish digital receivers, motorised digital receivers with traditional positioners built-in, and motorised receivers which use DiSEqC 1.2 software.

Mixed into all categories you'll find several combined receivers which can deal with both analogue and digital transmissions.

For each category and model there is a lot of information, much of which many buyers need not worry about. For a fixed dish digital receiver, look for plenty of channels, a common interface or built-in conditional access module, and DiSEqC 1.0 LNB switching.

If you want to receive channels on multiple satellites you'll need even more channels, but most importantly you'll need a built-in positioner or DiSEqC 1.2 software, depending on the type of motorisation you go for. One golden rule applies to any satellite system: don't rush out and buy the first model you see. Decide what you really need – both now and for the future – and consult this guide and your dealer for advice.



Antennas come in a wide range of shapes and sizes, but you'll need a large dish for multi-satellite. A smaller dish is required for Sky Digital

WHAT ABOUT INSTALLATION?

Whatever model you pick, the dish will have to be installed. You can do this yourself, but it's a task for the DIY-competent only.

The installation must be done correctly if you're to receive the proper quality of pictures and sound.

A typical simple Astra installation will cost between £40 and £80 and will take a professional anything from 30 minutes to a couple of hours to install.

A multi-satellite installation is a far more complex task (and therefore much less suitable for trying yourself) and will cost you anything from £200 upwards.

WHAT TO ASK?

Unless you know a fair amount about satellite TV already, it's probably wise to buy your system from a dealer, rather than through mail order. Visit as many satellite dealers as you can, and try to see every possible system in use. Have a go yourself.

If you don't like the way a receiver operates, it's better to find out in the shop than in your lounge after you've bought the wrong model. Don't be afraid to ask questions. Ask about other models, why the system on offer is right for you and why it's better than the others available.

Check the price of the receiver and for the installation – some shops appear to offer a bargain on the equipment but cash in on the installation charges.

Make sure you are being offered the right size dish for your area – even though a 60cm dish may work all right in Penzance on a fine day, the picture will suffer when it rains.

If you intend to subscribe to any foreign channels, think about arranging it through the same dealer you buy your system from – you may qualify for a discount.

Use our Guide To Euro Digital Channels to decide which channels you're after, which satellite you need, and what dish size you require.

WHAT NEXT?

Once you've selected your satellite TV system and had it fitted, and the installer has shown you the basics, there's nothing more you have to do.

Watching satellite TV is then as easy as watching the five channels of terrestrial TV you're already used to.

Now perhaps you should think about a second receiver for the bedroom... ■

sky digital receivers

KEY TO SKY DIGITAL RECEIVERS

Known as the Sky Digibox, these receivers are the only way to pick up both the Sky subscription channels and channels from ITV, Channel 4 and Five.

All Sky Digiboxes have an integrated Videoguard conditional access module, and support the OpenTV software used for interactive TV and the electronic programme guide.

The remote controls are interchangeable for all Digiboxes except Sky Plus, which has extra recording and playback controls

RECEIVER PRICE: Prices are for guidance only. Individual retailers may decide their own price, and What Satellite & Digital TV cannot be held responsible for market prices

MONTHLY SUBSCRIPTION: Sky Plus requires an extra monthly subscription to take advantage of its digital recording features

NUMBER OF LNB INPUTS: Two LNB inputs are useful for watching one channel while recording another

SYMBOL RATE: The data rate varies from transponder to transponder, according to the level of compression and number of channels. Low symbol rates are used by news feeds with a single channel (SCPC or Single Channel Per Carrier), but most transponders on Astra, Eurobird and Hot Bird work on 22000 and 27500

HARD DISC SIZE: Measured in gigabytes, this does not reflect recording capacity, which depends on the level of compression used for each recording MODEM: Used to inform Sky of any Box Office events purchased, or for registering with some interactive services and downloading extra information. A faster modem will supply faster downloads.

NUMBER AV OUTPUTS: For direct connection using Scart cable to a TV or VCR for superior picture and sound

S-VIDEO OUTPUT: A dedicated S-video mini-DIN output connects to your TV or VCR for superior picture

STEREO AUDIO OUTPUTS: Phono sockets supplying left and right analogue audio channels, along with any Dolby Pro-Logic surround signals

DIGITAL AUDIO OUTPUT: For noise-free audio, either a coaxial link (c) or an optical link (O)

DOLBY DIGITAL: Receivers which can pass the AC-3 encoded signal through their digital audio output will produce superior Dolby Digital surround sound with a suitably equipped audio amplifier

NUMBER UHF OUTPUTS: Extra outputs can be used to supply TVs in other rooms

UHF TUNING RANGE: Tuning the channel which a receiver 'broadcasts' to by the aerial lead. Larger ranges avoid crowding and interference between several receivers or VCRs

TESTED: Date of the What Satellite & Digital TV issue with a review of the receiver. Most will also be found in the following year's Book Of Tests

★★★ STAR PERFORMERS

SKY PLUS £199

The ultimate Sky Digibox – at least for now – Sky Plus slickly combines an excellent Pace digital satellite receiver with a cutting edge personal video recorder. The Sky EPG and many interactive services run fast enough to be a pleasure rather than a chore, but you'll have to pay an extra £10 monthly subscription for the PVR features, on top of your Sky subscription (but not if you subscribe to more than two premium channels).

PIONEER DBR-TF100GB £99

Freeview adapters come and go but few are as feature-stuffed and stylish as the DBR-TF100GB. This slimline box has an elegantly presented menu system featuring a now-and-next EPG. Picture and audio qualtiy are exceptional via the digital tuner and there's MHEG-5 software for interactive services. There's a built-in screengrabber and (for those concerned about screen burn) a screensaver feature, comprehensive set of connections includes two Scarts which include S-video support, and a Dolby-enabled digital optical audio output.

digital/analogue motorised receivers

KEY TO DIGITAL/ANALOGUE MOTORISED RECEIVERS

To view the programmes from more than one satellite, a motorised dish system is required. This includes a dish able to point at the different parts of the sky where the satellites are situated, and a positioner unit to control the dish motor The range of formats and standards on all the satellites is enormous, so multi-satellite systems must be flexible.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered).

Some of the column headings are the same as for the analogue and digital fixed dish receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

MAKE & MODEL: The models listed are all systems with integrated positioners which are capable of moving automatically to a new satellite on a channel change.

RECEIVER PRICE: The price of the receiver on its own without dish, LNB, mount and so on.

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: Not all receivers can pick up as many satellite positions as are needed for receiving 'everything'. The more the merrier.

KEY TO DIGITAL VIDEO RECORDERS

The recording complement to digital TV, DVRs can store video, audio and data on a computer-type hard disc drive, which enables instant access, simultaneous read-and-write, and many other features a VCR can't emulate. DVRs can be combined with a digital satellite receiver, digital terrestrial TV tuner, analogue TV tuner, or even with DVD players/ recorders and VCRs. They're most useful in tandem with an electronic programme guide rather than a VCR-style manual timer – this is known as a personal video recorder, or PVR.

HARD DISC CAPACITY AND RECORDING QUALITY LEVELS: Increasing the level of data compression increases the amount which can be stored on the disc, but reduces picture and sound quality; Sky's compression system changes dynamically to maximise both compression and quality

MP3 PLAYBACK: Plays compressed audio files, including music

BACKGROUND RECORDING: Watch from the hard disc while your DVR records live TV

LIVE TV CACHE: The DVR continually records (up to a fixed amount), so users can jump back fast to anywhere in the programme

PAUSE RECORDING: The DVR starts recording when 'Pause' is pressed

TWIN TUNERS: The DVR can record two channels at once or record one channel while another is being watched live

USB PORT: Transfers audio and video files to a PC, or vice versa

ETHERNET: Connects to a home network or broadband internet digital satellite receivers

KEY TO DIGITAL SATELLITE RECEIVERS

This category lists digital receivers used for receiving MPEG-2 channels. To watch such channels you require a DVB-compliant system instead of a conventional analogue receiver.

You will also need a dish pointed at one of the satellites broadcasting digital channels (see Guide To Euro Digital Channels for details) and a universal LNB to receive the entire Ku-band frequency range. Digital technology typically presents higher quality pictures and sound comparable to CD quality. Also, due to the nature of compressed digital TV signals, other facilities such as electronic programme guides, audio subchannels and teletext can be offered. While every digital receiver is capable of receiving these signals, it requires both a CAM and viewing card to decrypt scrambled pay-TV channels. Some receivers feature a Common Interface to enable a number of CAMs to be inserted for viewing of a number of different digital bouquets. Digital receivers can be linked to your existing analogue system for ease of use. This can be done using either a twin-output LNB, a priority switching system or a special IF splitter.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered). Many of the column headings are the same as for the analogue receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

COMBINED ANALOGUE: Some receivers integrate analogue and digital reception in one box. Digital features are listed under Fixed Dish Analogue Receivers

RECEIVER PRICE: Digital receivers are typically sold without a dish because it is assumed that buyers already have an antenna for analogue TV reception

LNB LOOPTHROUGH: IF signal from dish can be passed to a second receiver while this unit is in standby

DISEQC LEVEL: Versions 1.2 provides simple positioning and movement limits. USALS enables receiver to automatically calculate satellite positions. Satscan is competing but similar technology used by Nokia

POLARISER CONTROL: Polarisers are controlled by pulse (servo motor), current (magnetic), or voltage (combined LNB/polariser used in universal LNBs). Only current and pulse control allow skew adjustment for multi-satellite upgrading

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: The more the better. Standard DiSEqC 1.2 allows for up to 50 positions, but this is limited by some software.

FEC: Digital channels use differing Forward Error Correction rates (redundant information signals added to help receivers recognise and correct errors in transmission). Most receivers detect FEC automatically (A), but selectable FEC (S) can be useful for pinning down weak signals

CAM: The Conditional Access Module provides the crucial conditional access technology required to decode the scrambled signals broadcast by the service provider.

NUMBER CARD SLOTS: In addition to a CAM, digital receivers require a suitable DVB viewing card to be inserted before viewing encrypted digital channels

COMMON INTERFACE: A slot that enables a common interface module (similar in looks to a PC card) to be inserted in some receivers. Such a slot is desirable as it enables the separation of the proprietary CA technology from the receiver

TELETEXT: You don't need a TV equipped with teletext to access text from digital channels. The teletext signal is broadcast within the MPEG-2 data stream. If the receiver has a text option you should be able to access it

R232 INTERFACE: Links a computer printer or other peripherals to the receiver. May not be operational; available for future services

UHF TUNING RANGE: Some digital receivers don't have a UHF modulator (and so no tuning range) because the manufacturers consider that using UHF leads is inferior to Scart connections

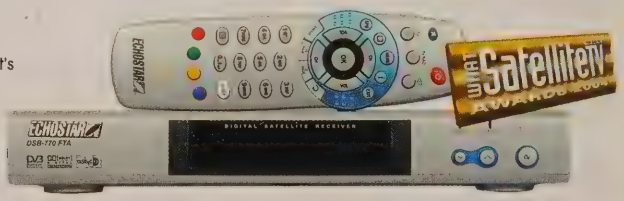
★★★STAR PERFORMERS

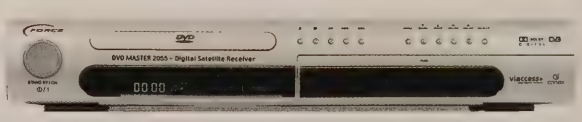
ECHOSTAR DSB-770FTA £99

Echostar's budget free-to-air receiver lives up to the satellite stalwart's high quality threshold. It comes with support for DiSEqC 1.2 and USALS and has a generous memory capacity for 4,400 channels and 80 satellites. It's very quick to scan and operation is a doddle using the simply laid-out menu system. Kudos too for the funky silver and blue design



FORCE D-MASTER 2055S £599

Something a bit different from the usual 'plain' satellite receiver is this DVD/receiver combi from Force. The space-saving appeal of having a decent DVD player onboard is matched by the quality of the receiver which has both Conax and Viaccess CAMs (a Viaccess only version is also available) as well as support for DiSEqC 1.2 with USALs. It has memory capacity for 5,000 channels and 36 satellites, and A/V performance is excellent both from TV channels and the DVD player.



digital satellite pc cards

KEY TO DIGITAL SATELLITE PC CARDS

These cards can also be used for multimedia-via-satellite, which includes high-speed downloads and 'streaming' video and audio, which can be watched on a computer using appropriate media player software, as well as the ability to surf the Internet at speeds higher than a normal telephone link.

KEY: A blob in the feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (selectable – they take one of a number of discrete values), F (fixed – they cannot be altered) or A (automatic – the receiver detects the correct value). Many of the column headings are the same as for analogue and digital receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

MAXIMUM RESOLUTION: The greatest resolution at which the card can produce a picture in a window. This is defined as a number of pixels wide, by a number of pixels high. The size this appears onscreen will depend on the resolution at which your monitor operates.

FULL SCREEN VIEWING: Most cards can stretch the maximum resolution picture to fill a larger screen, either by interpolating the missing lines or by spreading the original pixels over a block of several pixels on the monitor. Both of these methods reduce clarity at the expense of a larger picture.

RECORD TO HARD DISC: Software can capture still images from TV, or record in MPEG2 to the PCs hard disc drive

MAC ADDRESSING: Individual MAC addresses are widely used to verify subscriptions to internet and multimedia-by-satellite services and address information

VIDEO OUTPUTS: By attaching a TV to an external analogue video output, a larger picture can be obtained from the card without the loss of clarity by expanding to the fill your computer monitor. Also allows satellite TV programmes to be recorded on a normal VCR. PC cards will have either a composite video phono output socket, or a high quality S-video output.

AV INPUTS: With composite video or S-video inputs, your satellite card can be used to watch signals from an external DVD player, VCR, or you can use a videosender to send Sky Digital from the living room to the PC in your home office.

MINIMUM PC PROCESSOR: The slowest Pentium processor recommended for reliable use, in MHz

MINIMUM PC RAM: The minimum memory capacity (in MB) for running under Windows 98. Usually double under Windows 2000 and XP

★★★STAR PERFORMERS

PACE TWIN DIGITAL RECEIVER – £349

A combined personal video recorder (PVR) and digital terrestrial receiver, the Pace Twin is the first of its kind. Twin digital tuners mean you can record one Freeview channel while watching another and the modest 20GB hard disc can store around 10 hours of TV and radio. Recordings can be scheduled using either the EPG or manual timer option and, as with most PVRs, there's also a pause live TV option. Recordings can be rewound and fast-forwarded up to 64 times and, if need be, archived to videotape if you're in danger of maxing out the hard drive. Picture and sound quality are both excellent and a recent software update added support for interactive and digital text services.

TECHNISAT SKYSTAR2 £69

The ever popular satellite card has benefitted further from the addition of PVR functionality enabling you to record what you watch in MPEG2 onto your PC hard drive. Though it lacks DiSEqC 1.2 support or a common interface slot, its simple to set up and runs very smoothly on relatively machines. The SkyStar2 can operate as either a TV or a data card (for internet use), and the included EPG can be used to schedule recordings. A real bargain.

★★★STAR PERFORMERS

SONY KD-28DX50U £600

Sony currently leads the pack when it comes to IDTVs and this mid-range set is as good a reason as any to make your next TV a digital one. The latest pastel-hued Sony operating system is a cinch to use and comes with support for the Freeview seven day EPG when it finally appears. Picture and audio quality is as sharp as you like, benefitting further from the application of the latest version of Sony's 100Hz DRC processing technology.

PANASONIC TX-32DT40 £1.200

If you're looking to spend more than £1,000 on a new TV then this sizeable 100Hz IDTV is built to please. The onboard tuner delivers a great picture even if audio quality is a little muted on occasion and there are no less than three Scarts on the rear for easy connection of all the boxes in your living room. Other notable features include a seven-day ready EPG and a stylish two-tier stand.

Adult TV comes of age?

THINGS ARE LOOKING UP ON THE ADULT CHANNEL AND SPICE HAS GOT SPICIER. IT'S ABOUT TIME WE WERE TREATED AS GROWN-UPS, SAYS DAVE TAYLOR

The Adult Channel has been showing girl-on-girl videos most evenings at midnight. These have been featuring full penetrative sex with sex toys. Certainly way beyond anything that the channel has ever shown before.

The Spice Channel has been following suit, but that is not too surprising as the broadcaster is closely associated with The Adult Channel. So where XplicitXXX started, others proved soon to follow.

There have been few clues as to what is going on at the new satellite regulator in response to these advances. Surely that body reads Wotsat so will realise what is going down. There has been no official change in policy, no re-issuing of the programme code and no comment.

It was only a couple of years ago that The Adult Channel was severely reprimanded by the Independent Television Commission – the previous regulator – for showing what it called 'unacceptably explicit anatomical details'. This reprimand was the result of a complaint from a single viewer. Perhaps this time round the regulator is simply waiting for a viewer's complaint; that's highly unlikely to come from the now slightly more satisfied subscribers. But no doubt the activists at Mediawatch-UK will soon cotton on and fire off complaints to the Daily Mail.

Interestingly, though, it is not immediately obvious that these adventurous channels are overstepping the rules. The material is more explicit than '18-rated' softcore, but the regulators have sanctioned slightly stronger material than '18' for some time now. On the other hand, the channels are still stopping short of the expressly prohibited and fully hardcore 'R18' standard. The ITC had previously managed this vaguery by a private arrangement, telling broadcasters what was or was not acceptable. So now this middle ground has just shifted a little. What was previously slightly stronger than '18' is now slightly weaker than 'R18'.

But most importantly of all, surely a move to full hardcore must now be inevitable. The only sensibly defined guidelines available to Ofcom are those provided by the video censors, the British Board of Film Classification. Its hardcore 'R18' guidelines ensure that material is both legal and free of anything harmful. In addition its guidelines are currently used by all the law enforcement agencies to decide what's legal and what's not. To keep track of any further developments why not visit www.ofwatch.org.uk.

Gay TV is a recent start-up on British satellite but seems to be showing material very similar to that shown on Spice Xtreme. The material is steadfastly softcore. The channel has decided on a novel method of irritating viewers. Not only does one have to register with the company and provide banking details, but also has to enter a PIN. All very reasonable, you may think, but one has to enter the PIN at every break in the evening's programming. This means that one cannot time-shift on a video and watch at a time more conducive.

The Adult Channel has been going way beyond anything that the channel has ever shown before. The channel's Euro 2004-themed series Wet Dream Team (above) starts on June 2 at 11pm, continuing every Wednesday

Britain has been suffering from an excess of nannying regulators for as long as one cares to remember. The situation seems slightly better in Australia, where no regulator will own up to the task of overseeing sex on satellite.

AUSSIE RULES

Australians have several foreign-based hardcore services such as Free-X TV, Blue Kiss, InXWorld, Sexz TV and Back Room. The promoters claim none of the licensing authorities, the Australian Communications Authority, the Australian Broadcasting Authority, nor the Office of Film and Literature Classification has the jurisdiction to monitor or ban the content.

The film censor said that because the services were broadcast rather than on film, they did not fall within its jurisdiction. The Communication Authority said that it licensed the carrier, but not in terms of content. The Broadcasting Authority sidestepped the question and said that it had sought legal advice and was about to launch an investigation.

Whether there are too many regulators or too few, let's hope that all viewers everywhere can get their satellite X ■

In the mood

Wednesdays in June on Playboy TV are devoted to the naughtiest shows, including the lesbian delights of Sam Gets Her Girl, office debauchery in Friday Night Monday Morning, erotic film noir in Ashes To Ashes and period costume romps in Medieval Mischief.

Interactive phone-in show Nightcalls with Nikki & Crystal returns on June 21. Aurura Snow acts out viewers fantasies in Private Calls from June 22. Lexington Steeles welcomes guests in Lex in The City from June 15, and there's a collision between Hip Hop and adult entertainment in Buckwild from June 26.

Euro 2004 is upon us and The Adult Channel has its own club – Screw Alexandria FC – an all-girl team for action in the dressing room. The players are great up front and will definitely score. Starts June 2 at 11pm, continuing every Wednesday.

On Saturdays The Adult Channel devotes a whole night to special themed programmes. On June 5 it's Raw & Real Night. Presenters get all shook up with members of the public who would love to be porn stars.

June 12 is Girls in Uniform Night. Maids, nurses and teachers are just a few of the outfits as the imagination runs wild!

An all-new series of Ben Dover starts this month on Television X – The Fantasy Channel, and a whole night is dedicated to the cheeky king of gonzo Britporn.

Always looking for star talent the channel has bagged Nicola Holt from Big Brother to appear in her new series Big Bummer. She's out of the diary room, laid bare and loving it. Every Monday, 10.10pm.

Top performers from America grace the premiere of Last Resort. Studs Randy Spears and Peter North frolic away on this paradise island (Friday June 4 at 10.10pm).

"The Secret World of Satellite TV"
How can you get foreign adult channels on a Sky Digibox?
What the dealers never tell you about adult channels!
Plus an in-depth unbiased report on UK adult channels on Sky Digital and cable TV

- Decoding digital & non digital satellite channels
- How smart cards work & how they are "hacked"
- No subscription satellite TV - all the options
- The real unbiased truth about pirate cards
- Extra channels at no extra cost
- Digital satellite vs Freeview digital
- Euro Digital vs Sky Digital

These are just a few of the topics covered in our "Satellite TV Expert" package. For more details see our web site:

"Lovers: Light The Flame Every Time!"

New! Do you experience the ultimate pleasure every time? Hit the spot & be intimate more often with the Omax feminine massager. It's been tested on TV & widely reported in the press:

Omax Rechargeable

- "It's a massager but, turn it upside-down & the ingenious shape makes it work on the spot where a woman's most sensitive." - The Good Sex Guide, Channel 4.
- "It'd get an Org--m out of a stone!" - Bizarre magazine.
- "No gutless battery operated novelty or toy, it was the one product that worked for every couple in our test." - Esquire magazine.
- "It really works. What fun!" - Cosmopolitan magazine.
- "We like this... it's streamlined, it's discreet, it's everything!" - The Good Sex Guide, Channel 4.
- "Lie back & enjoy the intimacy." - GQ magazine.
- "It can teach you things you may never have known about your body or your sexuality." - Chic magazine.
- "Level-1 gives a mild soothing massage, level-2 is very intensive... & level-3 was mind-blowing for both of us." - UK Living: Satellite TV.

OMAX RECHARGEABLE comes with four attachments & is the world's best selling massager for couples. User reports confirm success:

"The best 'night-in' we've ever had. It's been ages since we were able to show each other what we liked." - G.R. Leicester.

"At last, someone makes a proper one... Org--ms in 60 secs, we've been at it ever since!" - J.C. Tenby.

- Omax is cordless; No wires to inhibit, no batteries to keep buying (Charger included).

Full one year Parts & Labour Guarantee. Order yours now.

YOUR GUIDE TO LOCAL CAI QUALIFIED SATELLITE INSTALLER

You've bought your new satellite and now you want to install it. Who do you go to? Look no further than your local CAI installer.
The CAI (Confederation of Aerial Industries Limited) is THE recognised trade body for the aerial and satellite industry. The CAI is committed to raising standards within the industry and whilst the criteria for membership is extremely high, the consurer is assured of A QUALITY INSTALLATION AT A FAIR PRICE.

What is so special about a member of the CAI?

- CAI Members only employ qualified personnel whose work is monitored by an inspector.
- All CAI Members are required to work to the exacting standards laid down in the CAI's Codes of Practice.
- All CAI Members guarantee their installations for a minimum of twelve months. In addition, the CAI undertakes to back-up this guarantee with its own twelve months guarantee, for domestic installations only.
- CAI Members should carry identity cards that clearly state their name and company details together with a photograph.
- All CAI Members are required to have full insurance cover. This gives the consumer total peace of mind before the work commences.
- If a customer is unhappy with any aspect of the installation, the CAI has a formal complaints procedure.

Motorised Systems

The 15 Kg 1224 Supermount

(We can program a receiver for you) (1.5 magic CAMs at only £79.95 avail. with systems)

Advice. Our systems from Technomate & Echostar include internal 36 volt positioners and heavy duty "bolt-on" motors. (Or a V Box is included with the Xtreme.) This avoids the use of lightweight universal fit (i.e does not fit anything properley) diseqc motors. All our dish motors are 36V and up to 5A.)

Here are a number of examples from our web site.

Technomate CIP, Triax 80cm, Triax motor, 0.3dB LNB £319.95
Technomate CIP, Triax 90cm, Triax motor, 0.3dB LNB £329.95
Technomate CIP, Funke 1.0m alloy, H to H, 0.3dB LNB £399.95
Technomate CIP, Fortec Star 1.2m, 15 Kg 1224 H to H, 0.3dB LNB £499.95
Technomate CIP, Fortec Star 1.6m, Polar mount, act. 0.3dB LNB £674.95
Echostar 3600, Funke 1.0m alloy, H to H, 0.3dB LNB £569.95
Xtreme Hornet, V Box, Triax 88cm, polar mount, act. LNB £489.95

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 1
This video is packed full of easy to understand information. Including comparing the capabilities of dishes from 80cms to 1.8m, comparing polar mounts with horizon to horizon motors, we demonstrate a simple method for fitting & setting up a motorised system, budget, mid priced & top end systems, receiver programming, tools & products, digital receivers, how to recognise well engineered products, Suitable for beginners but we take you to an advanced level. We explain the terminology & the Physics.

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 2 Running time 2 hrs. 20 mins. £14.95 Free UK Del.
Including fine tuning the satellite arc, get the most out of your system, C Band equipment & programs, Indian & Middle Eastern channels, we visit "What Satellite" More tools, fault finding. Spectrum Analysers. Digital uplinking. We go live on 1W. Systems in flats, multiple receivers from 1 dish, system visits, and much more.

The Motorised Satellite Video Volume 3 Running time 2 hrs. 20 mins. £14.95 Free UK Del.
We talk to many manufactures and see dozens of new products. Including Nokia. Triax. Channel Master. Humax. RSD. Hirschmann. Cambridge. Unicom and many more. All of the latest digital products included. High efficiency dishes. Setting up a horizon to horizon motor. The 1224 Supermount. The Jumbo H to H motor for 1.8m plus dishes. Installing a Jumbo on a Channel Master 1.8m. Test instruments, Inexpensive satellite meters & inclinometers reviewed. Internet via satellite. Vol. 3 is a continuation of Vol. 1& 2 The 3 videos form a complete series. Once again the presenter considers technical subjects & explains them in "plain English".
(Paying by cheque? Videos should be payable to "AVS." All other goods "Visiondotcom Ltd.")

Better Satellite Reviews The Motorised Satellite Videos
"They'r crammed full of technical info. - all explained in easy to understand terms". - and reffering to the videos.
Costs will quickly be recouped if the advice is followed.
Customers Comments. I have just watched my copy of the Vol. 1 All I can say is SUPERB ! I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the video. It's about time someone expelled the "myths & mysteries of satellite tv & explains them in plain English./ Wish I'd bought the videos before I bought the system. / The Vol. 1 video has saved me loads of money

THE MIGHTY BOOSH

BBC Three, 10.30pm

This is a strangely old-fashioned comedy (in a good way) featuring two zoo-keepers who go on magical adventures.

You are likely to come away grinning like a loon. Julian Barrett and Noel Fielding star.

GAME OVER

Trouble, 5.30pm

A new animation from Simpsons writer David Sacks and voiced by Lucy Liu and Patrick Warburton (the television series version of Buzz Lightyear). Showing as part of Trouble's new AnimaTe strand.

IN THE CUT

Sky Box Office, every 60 minutes
Meg Ryan tries a different hairstyle in an attempt to appear edgy in Jane Campion's erotic thriller. It works a little bit, but it's likely you'll still be wondering when she's going to start on the ditzy career woman shtick she's famous for.

D-DAY HEROES

Discovery, 9pm
The D-Day landings, on June 6, 1944, marked the beginning of the end of The Second World War. This focuses on some of the men in the landing party and celebrates the heroic contribution of all the Allied troops.

PLAYMAKERS

FX, 9pm

A new series about American football may not sound all that appealing, but this is top-class entertainment – it's in almost the same league as Six Foot Under and Oz. Hard-hitting, issue-heavy, but still enthralling. Starring Omar Gooding.

MOST HAUNTED

FTN, 9pm

Derek Acorah and Yvette Fielding explore more spooky places. Maybe someone should start a drinking game: One shot every time Yvette freaks out, two when Derek gets possessed and three for a ghostly apparition.

TV CHOICES

LEGALLY BLONDE 2: RED, WHITE AND BLONDE

Front Row, every 60 minutes

Reese Witherspoon reprises her role as Elle Wood, the dizzy but surprisingly clever law student with a penchant for pink. Now she has graduated, Elle goes to Washington DC to lobby for rights for dogs.

KING OF THE HILL

FX, 6.30pm

More based in reality than The Simpsons or Family Guy, but just as funny, what with Hank Hill's overbearing obsession with propane and Texas, wife Peggy's belief she can speak Spanish, and son Bobby's crush on the girl next door.

CHARMED FINALE WEEKEND

Living TV, from, 11.40am

A marathon showing of all the final episodes of the witchcraft-themed series – from Shannon Doherty to Rose McGowan.

Watch the progression as the storylines got more bizarre and the outfits ever more tacky and slutty.

BATTLE OF THE LADS

UKTV Gold, 9pm

Gold pits Bob and Terry from The Likely Lads (James Bolam and Rodney Bewes, above) against Men Behaving Badly's Gary and Tony, to see who wins. It's up to the viewers, but it's likely to be a close-run thing. Poor Thelma, Dorothy and Deborah.

TV CHOICES

ANGEL

Sky One, 9pm

The last-ever episode (presuming the rumoured TV movies do not go ahead) – will any of the key cast members survive – and have any old faces managed to drag themselves on to the Angel set? David Boreanaz stars as the morose vampire.

EVER WONDERED ABOUT FOOD?

UKTV Food, 7:30 pm

Recipes, the history of chocolate and why it tastes the way it does. Whether you go for the gloopy, sugary milky bar beloved by the British, or the dark smooth French or Swiss stuff, bars have only existed since the 1800s.

TV CHOICES

AMERICA'S NEXT TOP MODEL

Living TV, 10pm

A group of tall, willowy women compete to find out who will fit this year's conception of what makes a top model.

It seems to have a lot to do with who can be moulded, rather than who will break the mould.

GOODBYE, LENIN!

Sky Box Office, every 60 minutes

A fascinating and funny film set in East Germany just after the fall of the Berlin Wall. Young Alex (Daniel Bruhl) tries to protect his mother from the shock of the new when she wakes from a coma.

TV CHOICES

FRIENDS

E4, 9pm

The first in the final two-part episode. Phoebe may be married now, but will Rachel leave, or will she stay and get back with Ross? Or will he go with her to France?

More importantly, will Joey's spin-off series be worth watching?

QUEER EYE UK

Living Tv, 9pm

Very like the US Queer Eye For The Straight Guy – only the accents have changed. The Fab Five are (arguably) slightly more attractive than their American counterparts, but the guys they make over are just as (if not more) slobby.

ANNE FRANK REMEMBERED

UKTV History, 9pm

In an astonishing lack of vision a publisher once turned down Anne Frank's diary, saying it didn't show enough insight. This programme marks the young diarist's birthday. Had she lived, and not died of typhus at Bergen-Belsen, she would have been 75.

THE PROUD FAMILY

Disney, 9.45am

Teenager Penny Proud is desperate to be treated like an adult, however, the adults aren't acting very grown-up themselves.

Voices are provided by Kyla Pratt, Soleil Moon Frye and Alisa Reyes.

TV CHOICES

HIT BY LIGHTNING

Reality TV, 10pm

Only one in 10 people struck by lightning dies, although the other nine may not always walk away unscathed. This shows what can happen to survivors, and reveals some of the lasting effects. Superpowers, perhaps.

MALCOLM IN THE MIDDLE

Sky One, 7pm

The Wilkersons desperately try to get on the neighbours' good side after they discover there's a street party every summer when they are away. Frankie Muniz, Bryan Cranston and Jane Kaczmarek star in this clever and edgy comedy series.

TV CHOICES

DAYS THAT SHOOK THE WORLD

UKTV History, 10pm

Originally shown on BBC Four, and the Best Documentary winner in this year's Readers' Poll. An innovative series that focuses on pivotal moments in world history, such as the assassination of Martin Luther King.

STEVE-O

Men & Motors, 11pm

Johnny Knoxville may have gone on to movie stardom in films like Grand Theft Parsons, but his Jackass co-star Steve-O is firmly entrenched in what he does best – acting like a complete idiot. Well, when people are daft enough to pay you for it...

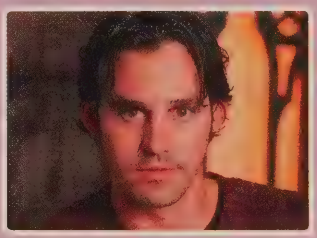
TV CHOICES

DEAD FAMOUS

Living TV, 9pm

Gail Porter casts a sceptical eye over the proceedings as psychic (or 'sensitive' as he calls himself) Chris Fleming guides her around the US in search of the ghosts of dead celebrities.



BUFFY THE VAMPIRE SLAYER

Sky One, 6pm

Another classic episode of the teenage vampire-hunting series. Xander (pictured) gets bitten by a hyena and takes up with a vicious gang. Anyone who is squeamish about killing baby pigs should probably avoid this episode.

TV CHOICES

SPIRITED AWAY

Sky Box Office, every 90 minutes (dubbed)

Award-winning Japanese animation about a little girl who has to save her parents from a peculiar dream world, before they are turned into pigs forever. The subtitled version is screening every 150 minutes.

WILL AND GRACE

Living TV, 9pm

Geena Davis and John Cleese guest star (one of them plays Grace's sister – can you guess which?).

This series continues to entertain, intermittently, but maybe it's time to stop before it begins to outstays its welcome.

TV CHOICES

24

Sky One, 9pm

Another crucial hour – it's 7am and Saunders' daughter has been identified. Tony wants to bring her in, but Jack (Kiefer Sutherland) has a riskier plan. Meanwhile, Bill Cole is at large and infectious. Ooh, it's nail-biting. And still no bathroom breaks.

EXTREME MAKEOVERS

Living TV, 10pm

Watch in horror as perfectly normal, pleasant-looking women and men submit themselves to extreme plastic surgery. The results are almost always freakish. This is possibly one of the signs of the Apocalypse. All that excised skin will return to haunt us.

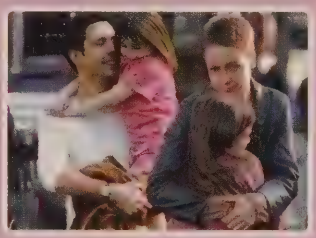
TV CHOICES



IN AMERICA

Front Row, every 60 minutes
Samantha Morton stars in Irish director Jim Sheridan's gritty contemporary drama about a young Irish family's attempt to emigrate to the US. Apparently, America is still supposed to be a place to aspire to for some bizarre unknown reason.

COLTRANE IN A CADILLAC

Men & Motors, 9pm
He's probably best known for playing friendly giant Hagrid in the Harry Potter movies right now, but actor-comedian Robbie Coltrane also has a love of classic American gas-guzzling cars. Join him on his Cadillac road trip around the US.

ABOUT SCHMIDT

Sky Movies 1, 8pm

Jack Nicholson plays Schmidt, a retired insurance agent who decides to go on a road trip after his wife dies. His aim is to make peace with his estranged daughter. Nicholson and his co-star Kathy Bates were both nominated for Oscars.

WALLIS SIMPSON

Biography, 7pm

Wallis Simpson was born on this day in 1896. In 1936 King Edward VIII abdicated to marry the twice-divorced and impossibly thin American. Many rumours have surrounded her and the marriage, but are any of them true?

SCRUBS

Sky One, 7.30pm

It's Carla and Turk's wedding – will it go without a hitch, or will it be plagued by amusing misadventures and bizarre unlikely scenarios? Well, what do you think? Zach Braff, Donald Faison and John C McGinley star.

STONEHENGE REDISCOVERED

National Geographic, 8pm

It's still a bit of a mystery why Stonehenge was built and who did the building, but new research may reveal some answers. Whether the children danced to the pipes of Pan is debatable, though.

TV CHOICES

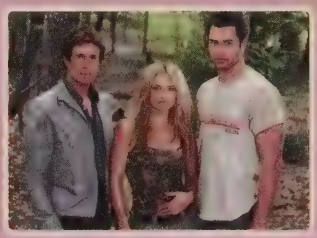
HOLES

Front Row, every 60 minutes

Based on a well-loved (in America) children's book about a young boy who is sentenced to hard labour in the desert after he's convicted of a crime he did not commit (naturally). Sigourney Weaver stars.



MUTANT X

Sky One, 4pm

Strike a pose. The new mutants return with their shiny hair, perfect bodies and fairly unimpressive powers. However, they do have the ability to look remarkably well-groomed in any given situation, which is good.

TRU CALLING

Sky One, 8pm

In a Groundhog Day scenario Tru manages to mess up her rescue mission four times, and as a result has to live the same day over until she gets it right. Eliza Dushku stars as the heroine with a penchant for running about.

MARCO POLO: THE CHINA MYSTERY REVEALED

National Geographic, 1pm

Legendary explorer Marco Polo wrote a book about his travels to China, but failed to mention tea, foot binding and chopsticks. Did he even bother going, or did he make it all up while sitting in an inn in Florence?

TV CHOICES

LOVE ACTUALLY

Sky Box Office, every 15 minutes

Richard Curtis' debut as a director links together a set of stories involving love, and most of them are very dull indeed. Bill Nighy and Emma Thompson are always worth watching, but most of the rest is hit-and-miss. Watch for turns from many famous TV faces.

FOUR WEDDINGS AND A FUNERAL

Film Four, 10pm

Richard Curtis wrote this (Mike Newell directed) massively successful British film. It made a star of Hugh Grant, who's used the same persona ever since. Andie McDowell, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Simon Callow and John Hannah co-star.

WHAT THE TUDORS DID FOR US

UKTV History, 9pm

Adam Hart-Davis's follow-up to What The Romans Did For Us reveals some innovations and culture we would not have were it not for the Tudors. Flushing toilets, theatres, lead pencils and spies were all invented in this period.

FRANKENSTEIN TRIPLE BILL

Sky Cinema 1, from 8.30pm

Although there has never been a particularly accurate screen adaptation of Mary Shelley's 1818 novel (not even Kenneth Branagh's version with Robert De Niro), the Doctor and his monster have provided some of the best moments in cinema.

TV CHOICES

DEATH TO SMOOCHY

Front Row, every 120 minutes

Maligned on its US release, and never shown theatrically in the UK, this dark comedy is definitely not suitable for children. Ed Norton is the children's entertainer marked for death by creepy predecessor Robin Williams.

JAG

FX, 10pm

Harm returns to Washington, only to discover that Admiral Chegwidden has processed his resignation. And a missing female officer is charged with desertion when she is found to have married a Bedouin Sheik.

TV CHOICES

CHRISTMAS IN JUNE

Boomerang, from 6am

Is summer too much for you – are you already craving turkey, cranberry sauce, and crackers? Boomerang seems to think you are – so why not get drunk on sherry, dig up a tree from your backyard and indulge in this unseasonal entertainment.

OSMOSIS JONES

Discovery, 4pm

The notorious Farrelly brothers tried something new with this part-animated, part live-action movie. When Frank (voiced by Bill Murray) gets ill, Osmosis Jones (Chris Rock) a white blood cell, comes to the rescue. So we're still in the area of bodily functions, then.

GLAM ROCK NIGHT

Biography, from 8pm

There are many definitions of Glam Rock – some oddballs think Slade count. Here, Biography sensibly includes Alice Cooper and David Bowie, along with Queen and modern wags The Darkness.

CINEMA LEGENDS: JACK LEMMON

Sky Cinema 1, from 2pm

Showing classics The Fortune Cookie (4pm) and The Odd Couple (6.10pm), co-starring the estimable Walter Matthau, as well as the less well-known The Wackiest Ship In The Army, with Ricky Nelson.

TV CHOICES

CELEBRITY POKER CLUB

Challenge?, 11pm
Glamorous stars such as coughing Major Charles Ingram, 'Nasty' Nick Bateman and TV psychiatrist Raj Persaud compete against each other in a gambling challenge. Which of these luminaries is best at mind games?

THE SMOKING ROOM

BBC Three, see EPG for details
A comedy set in the smokers' room of an unnamed company. More about office politics and gossipy intrigue than smoking – although there is a lot of that. This certainly promotes the view that smokers are slackers.

TV CHOICES

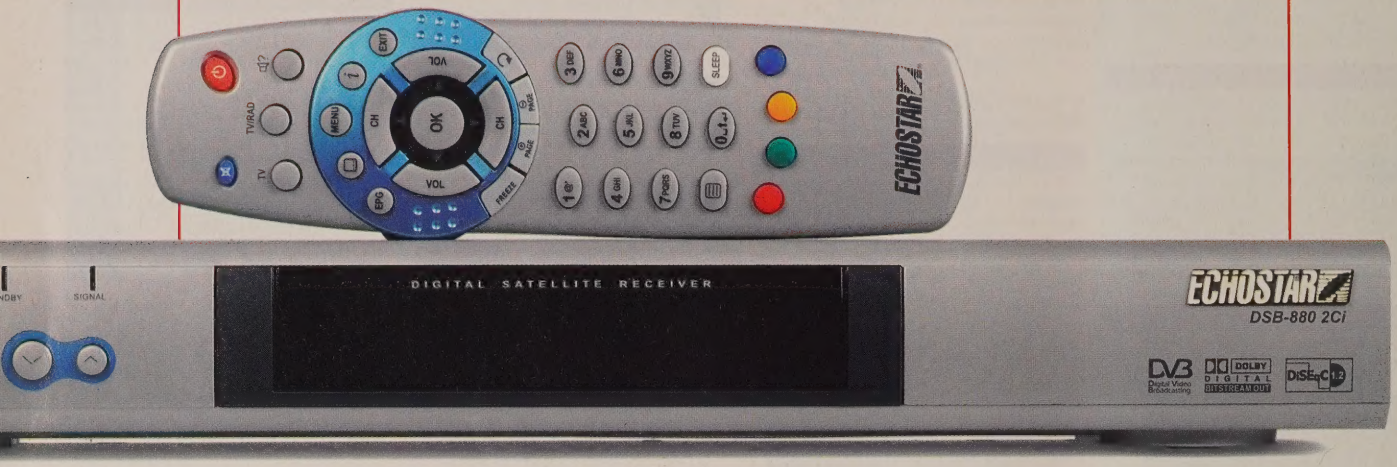
YOUNG ADAM

Sky Box Office, every 60 minutes
Ewan McGregor does what you expect of him (ie, gets his bits out), but American audiences were almost deprived of the wondrous sight when censors threatened to cut the offending parts (of the film). They were eventually restored.

SLAVE ISLAND: A MEET THE ANCESTORS SPECIAL

UKTV Documentary, 1pm
In 1991 the remains of 400 people were discovered beneath beneath the skyscrapers of New York. The bodies, some given royal burials, were of some of the 20,000 enslaved Africans transported to America.

WIN one of five



Echostar DSB-880 2Ci satellite receivers

Echostar is one of the key marques in satellite TV, a name which has been synonymous with quality and innovation for as long as What Satellite & Digital TV has been going.

These receivers have always been premium models, so when Echostar launched a budget range of receivers, we weren't surprised that they were as good as ever. The DSB-880 2Ci is a compact unit with a twin common interface, capable of picking up just about any European TV channel with the right viewing card and conditional access module.

Built around an STi 5518 chipset and 8MB of memory, it can store up to 4,000 channels on 80 satellites, and navigate between them using DiSEqC motors and switches, or USALS auto-location. There are event timers, and the EPG can handle a full seven days of programme info, while the software is updated direct from satellite.

It has RGB Scart outputs, an S-video output, digital audio output with Dolby Digital support, and a modulated UHF output.

It's slick and easy to use, with a handy remote control, favourites lists and excellent navigation options. Both picture and sound quality are first-rate.

We gave the DSB-880 2Ci one of our coveted Hardware Awards last month, and Echostar is offering five lucky readers a chance to win one. All you have to do is answer the question below.

If you don't get lucky, you can find out more about the DSB-880 2Ci at www.echostar-int.com, or call 0031 546 815122. The closing date is June 20 ■
